The National Association of Schoolmasters has extended its hoycott of examinations in the North to another area in which 45,000 more children could be about more crutaren could ne affected. That makes a total of ahout 80,000 children, at least half of whom may not be awarded Certificate of Secondary Education (CSE) grades this

Earlier this week, in face of opposition from parents and some of its own members, the association called off part of its ban. It had told 4,500 members not to invigilate or modarate examinations. Now it has reversed that but told them to hold on the parents and marks that come to papers and marks that come into their possession, so that results will be frozen while the dispute continues.

The next victim is likely to be the West Yorkshire and Lindsey examining board, which sets papers for schools in the Lindsey area of Lincolnshire and the West Riding.

West Riding.

What is not clear is how far the association is prepared to damage the careers of children. On Tuesday it stopped short of plunging the CSE in the Northeast into chaos as another 25,000 pupils were allowed to ait their mathematics and English mathematics and English examinations.

Mr Allen Sharp, deputy director of Durham education authority, the county worst hit so far, said that during the first two days of the boycott two schools out of 70 had no examinations and 13 had some of their examinations and 13 had some of their nations and 15 had some of their examinations halted.

He said: "It was fairly obvious that if the ban on invigilating had gone on, something like 90 to 95 per cent of the schools would have been affected."

So far, the boycott in Nor-thumberland, Durham and Tees-side bas probably affected bet-ween 2,000 and 4,000 of the 200,000 subject entries.

Mr Colin McInes, the association's north regional officer, said they bad enough markers and moderators who were members to freeze the results of 100,000 papers. "This will be his him pressure resource in the

Beef and pig producers gave the club. To enable him to get to the House on time the start

At least one of the pig producers expressed gratitude for the temporary help given when the minister first came back from Brussels, but pointed out that the market had since gone back and pigs were again making a loss. Mr Peart said that expansion was still government policy. He had invited the farmers' unions and other interests concerned to discuss the industry's long-term future with the Govern-ment. His officials had begun

ment. His officials had begin meetings with them.

At present the Government had to work within e system that needed to be improved. Goaran-teed prices for beef had been replaced by the EEC arrange-ments, which relied in part on permanent intervention in the market.

He did not see how he could explain to the British housewife that the Government was taking good beef off the market to force up the price she would have to pay for what was left. Therefore the Government had sought an alternative arrange-ment and, as a result of the Brussels settlement total direct subsidies to British beef producers were hrought up to about £100m a year, a sum that was not available in other member states of the EEC.

He added later that he would like to see a return to a system of guaranteed prices for beef, but that would need agreement inside the Government in Westminster and in the EEC. In spite of high prices and intervention-buying, European heef producers were also in trouble.

It was smiping from these elements which contributed considerably to the melancholy into which Herr Brandt sauk in the last months of his tanure.

Chancellorship has two disad-vantages which he must overcome in order tn rescue the situation. There is the problem of his own bealth. For the past couple of years he has had repeated treatment for thyroid trouble, and has also fallen vic-tim to that apparent curse of the German nation, circulatory trouble or low blood pressure. At present, he seems fit,

The other problem is going to be keeping the coalition with the Free Democrats in being. Both parties have stated their intention of carrying on with the partnership. But the Free Democrat leader, Herr Scheel, is expected to become President 24 hours before Herr Schmidt becomes Chancellor.

At the same time, I request that

With obedient greetings,

Politicians, diplomats and journalists streamed back to their offices in the early hours of yesterday, while several hundred insomniac citizens who had heard the news on all-night radio programmes gathered outside the Chancellor's villa in tha Bonn suhurb of the Venusberg. They formed a torchight

With daylight, the political conclaves began. By 10 am, it was known that the SPD had agreed to accept Herr Brand's proposal that Herr Schmidt should succeed him. The FDP concurred shortly afterwards. The breakneck speed of events continued unabated Herr Brandt, extremely tense but stone-faced, went to a tumul-tuously emotional meeting of his parliamentary party in the Bundestag. He received an ovation which almost turned into a riot, and accepted a huge bunch of roses. Tears were shed. After 20 minutes the Chancellor, having told his colleagues that he intended to stay on as party chairman and as a Bundestag deputy, reemerged, still apparently impassive but notably mora relaxed.

The next engagement was his call on the President and the formal leave-taking of the shaken members of his coalition Cabinet. Under the constitution, they lost their offices with him, but the President formally asked them to stay on as a caretaker administration pending the election of a new chancellor. The four and a half years of the Brandt era were officially over.

Today it was revealed that Herr Brandt is to send a letter to all his party's one million members to explain his astounding decision in more description.

Until this letter becomes public, the mystery remains, and the gap in public knowledge of the story behind the most sensational resignation in recent political history has been eagerly filled by the rumour-mongers.

Republican leader turns against Mr Nixon after hearing tapes

From Patrick Brogan Washington, May 8

Senator Barry Goldwater of Arizona, a former contender for the United States presidency, said last night that he expected mr Nixon to resign if he was impeached by the Huuse of Representatives. He would do so, according to Mr Goldwater, rather than drag the country through two or three months of televised terror—the trial hefore the Senate.

The senator also said that the people of Arizona were three to one against the President hecause "they just don't like him". Arizona delivered one of the strongest votes for Mr Nixon in 1972 and he went there last week for a Republican rally and was well received.

If this defection were not enough, Senator Hugh Scott, minority leader in the Senate and a bitherto unfaltering sup-porter of the President, has denounced the transcripts of the White House tapes. Before he read them, he had said that they confirmed bis earlier protestations of Mr Nixon's innocence.

Now he says: "They are a leader of the Senate. Once ants.

He was shown scraps of transcript last year, carefully edited and chosen morsels, and marched out of the White House to proclaim that the transcripts proved both that Mr Nixun was guiltless and Mr Jaba Dean a liar. The Senator kept repeating this claim, despite the lack of faith in the White House shown by more cautious Republicans.

He declared: "I have found nothing which would indicate any guilt of a nature that would be impeachable." Now he has read the transcripts; and vesterday he issued this careful statement: "I will not take a position supporting any form of immorality or criminality, as the transcripts indicate."

The Fiat 128 is a most successful 1100cc car, with sales of over 1,750,000 in the past five years. Why? Simply because it gives you more for your moneyand it's much more enjoyable to drive.

Over 13 million owners have proved for themselves that the Fiat 128 offers outstanding reliability, quality, value-for-money, engineering and safety.

These are the features that have won the Fiat 128 no less than seven car-of-the-year awards — more than any other car — and make it the most successful 11 00 cc car of the past five years. And it is these same features, combined with low running cost, that make the Fiat 128 such an intelligent choice for today's motorists.

More economy Quite apart from its superb fuel economy-38 mpg overall consumption (The Times, Jan 3) —the Fiat 128 brings you low running costs because it is mechanically reliable, and its advanced design features ensure high strength, excellent resistance to impact, and full passenger safety.

More value At just over £1,000, you get a well-equipped, spacious and modern family car. With room for five to travel in comfort, and a big 13 cu.ft. boot. Plus such refinements as full carpeting, cloth upholstery, reclining front seats, alternator, servo-assisted brakes with discs at the front, and radial-ply tyres.

More performance The Fiat 128 gives you full value in terms of performance. Front wheel drive, and wide track, ensure you get superb roadholding. And its small sporty overhead camshaft engine gets you from 0-50 in just 10.4 seconds, and gives you a top-speed capability of over 85 mph.

Before Sir John Donaldson, President Mr J. H. Arkell and Mr J. W. Kenrick

Kenrick

The National Industrial Relations Court instructed the commissioners of Sequestration appointed by the court to enable payment to be made of 447,000 compensation to Coa Mech (Engineers) Ltd. to accept an offer of 165,000 made to the AUEW by anonymous donors. The offer was made in the belief that the risk of damage to the oational economy arising from the union's strike call would be decreased.

The sequestrators were ordered to refund to the union, in addition to the union, in addition to the £65,000, the balance of £25,000 held under a previous sequestration, two blocks of giltedged securities, and £35,000 of the £160,000 of union funds in the Co-operative Bank held by the sequestrators. The remaining funds would be used to satisfy the costs of the sequestration, the £47,000 compensation, and county court judgment debts of ebout £4,000 in favour of former AUEW employees who had been unfairly dismissed by the union.

SIR JOHN DONALDSON said thet last Friday the Court had evidence that the union had failed to pay the court's award of E47,000 compensation by the fixed date end was in contempt of court. The union had been invited to defend itself but had not done so. The court had enforced its judgment by an almost total sequestration. an almost total sequestration union funds [The Times, May 4]. of union funds [The Times, May 4].
Sequestration was a remedy which any court was reinctant to use. But the lack of success of the county court judgment creditors, Mr Hill, Mr Quarendon, Mr Rodden and Mrs Hendrick, in attempting to get their money from the union had shown that no other remedy would be effective. The fact that the court had to find out which assets were "unprotected" necessitated a total sequestration. The court had taken steps to keep the disruptive taken steps to keep the disruptive effects to a minimum.

W. offset of the sequestrators and thereby give the court of the content of the c an opportunity of limiting the ill effects of the sequestration. The court said it would hold a special evening sating beginning at 5 pm on Monday. An hour hefore the court was due to sit a splicitor had called on the court secretary and asked whether the payment of £47,000 or more would make it minecessary for the sequestration to proceed. That was a most unusual inquiry, it was not a case of a fine being paid by a stranger to avoid an alternative sentence of imprisonment. The mion had not been fined. An offer to pay the

the court fisser and the court bad pointed out that it would consider any application made. However, no application was made. As the sequestration had been completed the court considered, which assets seemed protected, and which did not. The court had considered it right to give the milon an opportunity to come to the court today to claim, if it wished, that all its assets were protected. But the court was unwilling no maintain the sequestration over all the assets even for so short an additional period. Clearly the court could not retain only just enough to meet the fudgments, for the milon might have proved that part of the retained assets were protected. The court decided on Monday that if it retained control over f100,000 held in cash by a bank and two blocks of git-edged securities the court could properly release all the other assets to the milon, it was not a case, as was reported in the press, of the court seizing £300,000 worth of assets. The sequestrators had already selzed millions of pounds worth of assets in the process of sequestration. The court was releasing all those assets to the union except for the f100,000, the securities and the £25,000 they already held from a previous sequestration.

After Monday's hearing Mr Neill had asked to see him (Sir John) personally. He was right-to seek such an luterylew because a member of the Bar had a duty to the court as well as to his client. The union was in contempt. It was not proper for him to seek to intervene between the nulou and the court without first consulting tha presiding hudge. Sir John had told Mr Neill that the stage had been reached at which the bulk of the sequestrated assets had been released to the union and the court court would consider the disposal of the remainder at today's sitting. The only result of an application on behalf of Mr Neill's clients to pay on enait of an Neill's chents to pay money to the court or the seques-trators would be to increase the sum being retained. Mr Neill said that he would consult his clients and the court heard no more until the present hearing.

The incident was unusual but involved no technical problems.

The incident was musual but involved to technical problems. The only problems arose from the fact that the sequestration had already. Been completed. The unknown benefactors were told that they could apply to the court almost at ouce, but they did not do so. They were also told that they were completely free to give the money to the unloo or any other were completely free to give the money to the union or any other person. The court now knew that they had not done so. The court was now making a turther refund to the union. If the benefactors had paid any money after Monday's bearing today's refund would have been increased by a like amount. The same result would have been achieved by a gift to the union.

The union had been given the opportunity of eppearing to state whether they wished to claim that the retained assets were "protected" under section 154 (4) of the Industrial Relations Act, 1971. The union had not appeared. Since on the figures explained to the court nor more than 265,000 would be needed to meet the claims of con-Mech and the foor judgment creditors the court could clearly release both blocks of gift-edged securities and part of the cash still remaining in the sequestrators' possession.

The indement creditors' position possession.

The judgment creditors' position was unusual possibly unique. The court had been told that the claims of Mr Quarendon and Mr Hill were special in another sense. Both were union employees who had been held to have been unfairly dismissed. The union hed denied its own employees compensation and had refused to pay the judgment debts. The court was aware that it must not let indignation of the union's treatment of employees divert it from its duty to apply the law strictly.

Mr Scott had submitted that the court's decision must be based on principle since the case was unique and there was no guidance from the enthorities. One by product of the sequestration was to identify the mion's eccounts and where they were held so that it would be possible for the creditors to return possible for the creditors to return to the county court and apply for a garmishee or charging order against the assets. The remedy of their facias involved balliffs and the union had made it clear that they would have resisted them by force and other methods required knowledge of assets not previously available to the judgment creditors.

possessed funds belonging to the union. It those funds had been in the possession of any one other than the sequestrators the county court could have made a garnishee order in favoor of the creditors. Therefore the Industrial Court was the only obstacle to the county court exercising jurisdiction over the funds.

The only guiding principle was that justice was indivisible. The court must not allow its position as part of the High Court to defeat part of the High Court to defeat another court's order or another court's order or another court's methods of obtaining justice. Therefore it was court's duty to use any surplus funds to the sequestrators' hands to meet the judgment debts. The court was not deciding what its action would have been over creditors other than judgment creditors.

Mr Neill had appeared before the court at moday's hearing. His clients had offered to pay £55,000 either to Con-Mech and the judgment creditors or to the sequestrators. They believed that it would in some way decrease the risk of ment creditors or to the sequestrators. They believed that it would in some way decrease the risk of damage to the national economy arising from the AUEW's strike call. The court could not understand why. If the money were paid to the sequestrators more money would be refunded to the union. The same result would occur if Mr Neill's chients paid the money directly to the union. Prowided that it was clear that no surrender of the court's authority was involved, there was no reason in principle why it should not be accepted. The union had committed a contempt of court by not paying the compensation by April 29. The court would instruct the sequestrators to accept payment of the money offered.

Accordingly, the sequestrators would pay the union £25,000; the balance of the £100.000 previously taken and the accrued interest. The court had intended to order that the sequestrators pay £35,000 taken from the Co-operative Bank, but in

The first question was whether there was a "mark" within the Trade Marka Act, 1938. It was important to observe that it was more possible to describe or represent that which was said to be the which it was proposed to describe or represent that which was said to be the which it was proposed to describe or represent that which it was proposed to describe or representations of the describing or representations. In In re Junes' Trude Mark
((1886) 33 Ch D 392, 395) Lord Justice Lindley said that "a mark must be something distinct from the thing marked. The thing cannot be a mark of itself. ... That case was authority for the proposition that one could not register as a trade mark that which, at any rate so far as shape was concerned, was nothing but a representation of description of the article in question.

His Lordship did not consider that the ordinary meaning of "mark" in relation to goods extended to something which amounted to an entire and complete description or representation of the external appearance of the goods in question—the emire get-ship that the apputance ench registration of the capsule as a trade mark relating to itself, and it could not properly be regarded as an application for the registration of a "mark" within the meaning of the Act.

LORD JUSTICE LAWTON, concurring, said that what the applicants had sought to register were not marks at all within the meaning of the 1938 Act. The appearance of an article was something different from a mark upon it. A mark upon an erticle night be large or small; but if it became so large that it represented the appearance of the article it was no longer a mark.

Wife cleared of benefit offences: no mens rea

Moore v Branton

Before Lord Widgery, Lord Chief Justice, Mr Justice Ashworth and Mr Justice Bristow

Before Lord windgery, Lord Charly Justice, Mr Justice Bristow

[Judgment delivered May 7]

A wife who did not inform the Department of Health and Social Security when she drew benefit that her estranged busband spent weekends at ber bours in an attempt to effect a trial reconciliation because she did not hink the amount of benefit would be affected was nor acting dishouestly and did not coorravene section 29 of the Ministry of Social Security Act, 1956.

The section created an offence involving meos res in the true sense, and the evil aimed at was dishonestly in the true sense, the Queen's Bench Divisional Court said when allowing an appeal by Mrs Florence Joyce Moore, of Euromoore Crescent, Ingleton, by justices at Ingleton last September of making representations which she knew to be false, in that she had reported eny facts, which could affect the amount of her benefit and that she was entitled to £18.10 and £19.10 respectively, whereas that was not true because she had become reconciled with him, contrary to section 29.

Section 29 provides: "If any person—(e) for the purpose of obtaining benefit or any other payment under this Act for himself or for another person; or (h) for the purpose of avoiding or reducing any liability under this Act: makes any statement or representation which he knows to be false, he shall be liable" to imprisonment and/or fine.

MR JUSTICE BRISTOW said that the appellant parted from ber husband in 1970, and in 1971 e maintenance order was made in her favour. In 1973, as the justices found, she end her husband had a trial reconciliation; he lived with her at her home for weekends. There was nothing in the case stated to show that he contributed any money to the household other than noder the maintenance order.

The justices found that there was simply a trial reconciliation, and that although the appellant bad not informed the issuing office she bad told the truth when she said she did not think a trial reconciliation affected her benefit. The justices also found that ber failure to make disclosure was nor e dishonest failure with a view to committing a fraud. On those findings the case brought against ber was not made out. The appellant was not residing with her husband, which in itself was sufficient to quash the conviction, and Mr Howard did not seek to sustain it.

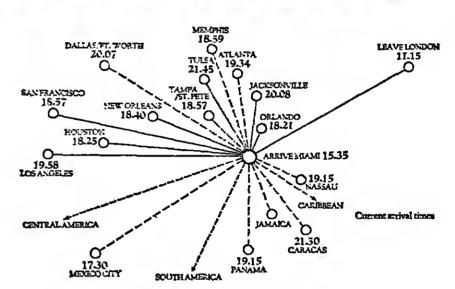

It was, however, right that the

It was, however, right that the court should deal with the question court should deal with the question posed by the justices, whether the essence of an offence uoder section 29 was the making of representations which the appellant knew to be false, or whether it was efailure to report any facts which could objectively, but without her knowledge, have affected the amount of her benefit.

Section 29 created an offence in. volving mens rea in the true sense. The evil almed at was dishonesty The evil almed at was dishonesty in the true sense, that of obtaining becefit to which a person was not eotitled. The justices found specifically that the appellant was not dishonest in that she truly believed that what had bappened could not affect her benefit. Indeed, it was doubtful whether the bushand's weekeed visits were within the words of paragraph 6 (c) of the notes requiring the person receiving benefit to inform the issuing office if anyone came to live in the house. If the justices found that the appellant genuinely did not the appellant genuinely did not believe that what had occurred could affect her benefit, they ought to have found her not guilty on that second ground also. Alive The Story of the Andes Survivors By Piers Paul Read

(Alison Press/Secker & Warburg, £3) burg, £3)
Two thiogs were remarkable about the 16 survivors of the twin-propeller charter flight from Montevideo to Sanuago de Chile which crashed 10,000 feet up in the Andes on Friday, October 13, 1972. The first was that they beld out for 72 days in deep snow before being that they beld out for 72 days in deep snow before being rescued; the second that they only did so by eating the flesh of their dead comrades. When the world began to take a monstrously greater interest in the serond fact than the first, the young survivors of the Old Christians Rugby XV decided to commission a sobering and truthful account of their terrible commission a sobering and truthful account of their terrible ordeal. Piers Paul Read, one of the most gifted English novelists under 35 (Game in Hewen urith Tussy Marx, Monk Dawson), tells us that it was first the idea of his American publisher that be should go to Montevideo and persuade the Old Christians that he was the man to write Alive.

that he was the man to write Alive.

It is, of course, an astonishing story and the pace of tho lest hundred pages or so is very exciting; but in wisbing Alive a deserved popular sucress and Mr Read a greater freedom to write novels. popular sucress and Mr Read a greater freedom to write novels, I cannot belp feeling that, from the formidable author of The Junkers, it is sballow in feeling and poorly written, and to wonder how suitable is a born novelist for a commercial and documentary project of this

In many ways he must have seemed an excellent choice. Like the Old Christians themselves, he was Catholic and had attended a distinguished Catholic school : he would the better communicate their plain faith in God's guiding presence on the moun-tain and convince others that it tain and convince others that it was perhaps easier to cut up and consume dead matter if you believed the eternal soul had departed from it than if you did not. Meat was meat, and the Lord provided.

In his novels Mr Read had shown himself singularly well equipped to subsume such extremities of human bebaviour as Nazism, Trappism and

while maintaining a severe detachment from the symptoms of borror and sufferiog them-selves: be bad never balked at describing, pain for pain, the iodescribable. He was particularly good at writing ebout the arly good at writing court to effect made by the body's machine—cells, glands, pumping of blood—on the mind, and thus on the actions plenned by the mind to be further executed by the body: that would be highly relevant to those who had bad to devise so many ways to escape the rumbling volranir snows of the cordillera. His narrative gifts were proven and his novels showed a general taste for risks and excitement. So far, exrellent.

On the other band, that taste had become at times almost an obsession with what be bimself bad called "the septic imaginabad called "the septic imagina-tion", and the Old Christians would not be very ronversant with that. Most of them were bearty and wholesome, deeply fond of their parents, following father into the firm or on to the land, praying for mother as land, praying for mother as the must important woman in their lives. To have written of these boys and their background with anything less than restraint would, of course, have been ill-mannered and probably irrelevant, yet for anyone who had written so incisively of the upper middle class in his most recent powel (The Unstart) such receot novel (The Upstart) surh good manners and restraint meant leaving a crucial aspect meant leaving a crucial aspect of his imaginative personality behind at the door.
The nature of revolution in the modern world was another Read theme unlikely to commend itself to the civilized thuroughbreds of Tupamaro country. In sum, Mr Read had his work cut out for bim by yesterday's news and was no longer terday's news and was no longer entirely his own man. That this bas made him deeply uneesy cannot, I think, be doubted by anyone who reads Alive. He has solved his dilemma in the most humane and least literary way possible, by writing an empathetic history, describing the boy's experiences in the smashed plane more or less with the colouring end emphasis that they must bave described them to him. Since few of them are exreptionally imaginative or articulate rerorders, the result, looked at in rold print is often seotentious and banal: canessa began a continuous dialogue with God. He had seen the film Flddler on the Roof and remembered how Tevye had spoken to God as a friend; he now took the same tone with his Creator. "You can make it tough, God", he prayed, "but don't make it impossible."

The two "doctors" made their way back over the seat cushions to the rear of the plane and returned to the dark, narrow tunnet of moaning, screaming humanity. To describe all mankind as "bumanity" is one thing; to use the collective on 30 or 40 people is, somebow, to debumanise them completely. It is in such uncertainties of tone from so fierrely fastidious a writer that Alive is so curious a book.

Alive is so curious a book.

It remains, as a story, unforgettable: I feel I know every sweep and rise of that booelittered valley, and several individual images remain sharply in the mind: the ominous condens wheeling overhead; the in the mind: the ominous con-dors wheeling overbead; the coming of summer—and the possibilty of life—in a pair of swallows, a single butterfly, a high bee; the soup tin, borsesboe and cow pat that told Canessa and Parrado they were on their way. In surh moments of fusion, in some of the boys' very moving in some of the boys' very moving letters to their families, there is a true rhythm of feeling established in which one recognizes a controlling imagination at work.

What a novel this would have made. How infinitely more real the boys, more terrible their isolation with a whimsical God, more agonizing their means of survival, more subtle their jubilant return to life, in e novel by Piers Peul Read. About a tenth of the people would heve bought it who are going to buy Alive, but the pot buils sadly.

How strong is the case for this law against wives?

The Spouses of United Kingdom Citizens Bouality of Treatment) Bill is a cumbersome name masking an intention to bring elief to thousands of British wives, and wives to be, who now have to choose be when being with their husbaods or living where they cant to live. Yet the Bill, which is to be presented to ion Berish husband in Britain.

The reason the Bill is not likely to be ressed is that the Labour Government is egains: it, albeit rather shamefacedly. Mr Roy Jenkins, the Home Secretary, clearly ealized the absurdity of allowing British ealized the absurdity of allowing British usbands the automatic right to have their lieu wives living here with them, but denying the same right in the converse case. The sheepistness of the Government is eightened by the clear breach which this baurdity makes in its policy of equality of reatment for women.

Mr Jenkins admitted to the House of commons in March that there was "an elevent of sexual discrimination which is difficult to defend". But, he went on, changing he rule would "undoubtedly lead to a subtantial and continuing new wave of mala manigration, particularly from the Indian subcontinent" and "there would be a subtantial effect on our rate of immigration." tantial effect on our rate of immigration."

The rule was originally introduced in 969 under the last Labour Government to nt an end to Commonwealth citizens havnt an end to commonwealth citizens having an automatic right to enter the Unifed ingdom if they could prove they were to larry a British national. The Immigration of 1971 had the effect of making the rule pply to all foreign husbands or prospecive busbands. At present therefore, between the country of the ause discrimination between different asses of aliens is not permissible, Amerian husbands, for instance, are being aught by a provision enacted to exclude sians.

Home Secretary can at his discretion allow foreign busbands to settle in Britain in special cases of bardsbip. These might ioclade cases where to require the woman to live with her spouse in his own country would be a great "cultural shock" to her. But the last Home Secretary, as well as the Immigration Appeals authorities, interpreted hardship very narrowly, and few husbands were in fact allowed in under the exception clause.

Mr Jenkins told the House that he would look at individual applications with com-passion and flexibility. There has already been a marked change of approach, for the hetter, according to one organization in-volved with the problem. The exception clause is being more liberally applied.

clause is being more liberally applied.

But this does nor satisfy critics of the rule, who question Mr Jenkins's assertion that to abolish it would lead to a "substantial and continuing new wave of immigration." There is talk—no action has yet been taken—of hringing cases before the Enropean Commission of Human Rights. The World Council of Churches has passed a strong resolution condemning the British Government's approach. Government's approach.

The extraordinary aspect of this issue is that there are virtually no statistics available which even attempt to assess the numbers involved. The Home Office has carried out no research, and the way its information on immigration is collated does not allow any relevant conclusions to be drawn. allow any relevant conclusions to be drawn.
In 1968, the last year before the rule, 1,676 Commonwealth citizens were allowed in to marry. Of these 1,496 were Asian.
Many of these came in as a result of an arranged matriage. There was some evidence of abuse of the system but the vast majority were genuine marriages arranged in good faith according to custom.

Since then there have been no figures. There are, it appears from talking to a number of bodies concerned with issues affecting immigrants, some hundreds of British wives either separated from their husbands or unhappily living out of the country, because of the law. Probably hun-dreds more are with their husbauds bere at present, because the men have been allowed in for some other reason, for example, as students. An unknown number wanting to marry have not been able to.

The figures for the likely "wave" are even harder to estimate. One way would be to assume the same rate as in 1968. This would amount to some 1,500 a year, although there would be a rush if the rule were abolished at a stroke. There is no way of knowing how many arranged mandates are in the work in the rule way of knowing how many arranged mandates. riages are in the pipeline, or would be if the law were changed.

There is another way of looking at it by studying the social pattern of unmarried women of Asian origin in Britain of marriageable age. An increasing proportion of them were born in this country or have lived here long enough to bave hecome more or less assimilated. They would he unlikely to marry arranged busbands whom they have never seen. In any case many of them, and many who are more recent arrivals, would find husbands in the settled Asian community here. There is, too, a trend away from arranged marriages even in more traditional communities.

Making-all the necessary allowances, a well-known research organization (which does not at this stage want to be named because its results are only tentative) has estimated that, at the very most, there are 10,000 women of Asian origin who might be the subject of an arranged marriage. The actual number who would go through with one would be much lower, and would not be a recurring factor. Mr Jenkins specifically stated that the main problem incifically stated that the main problem in-volved in changing the rule lay with arranged marriages. Quite apart from the moral issues involved, it may he that he has over-estimated the numbers involved.

But now Professor N. R. Tempest, Emerius Professor of Education at the University of Liverpool, has published an account of a project in which 15 seven-year-old children, with an average IQ of 140, were put together in a class for four years, given special teaching and observed very closely. The book is essentially an attempt to pro-cational problems, either they do well at school, but are bored and do not find the work chal-lenging enough, or they do badly because their abilities remain undiscovered or because they try to mask their cleverness to be like the other children. He adds that many clever children are never recognized to be very bright, particularly when they are not very good at expressing themselves. A quarter of the book is devoted yet again to the question of how you know a gifted child when you see one. Since Pro-fessor L. M. Terman in Cali-fornia in the 1920s first showed gifted children to be not the puny withdrawn egg heads they were always assumed to be, but lively, likable and physically superior all rounders, all surveys of gifted children bave reached much the same conclusions.

based on an assignment card system, using as much reference material as possible, all designed to develop critical and analytic thicking. They also explored the beach, streets and park surrounding the school, and went out on visits to meet specialists in particular subjects. Whatever one may think of this guinea pig approach (and we are nor told what happened to the nor rold what happened to the closidren when they left the class at 11) it is clear from the description of the activities that many of the children were very soon working happily at a level far beyond other children of their age.

greedy black sheep or vultures of the abortion world. Some of the 100 referral agencies gave shocere and professional advice for modest fees. But those who prospered in their own seedy warld were an undestrable aspect of commercialism which had crept in following the Abortion Act 1957.

Taxi drivers touted for petients and women had even been hijacked end taken to some surprising destination. Sometimes "fringe" doctors even resorted to extortion. Sums of £300 had been paid simply for being told where abortions were available. This nasty trade was the unacceptable face of the Abortion Act.

The Bill would bring thase agencies end bureaux under the control of the Socretery of State for Social Services. Mrs Castle could ilcence the reputable and ontlew the disreputable. ## Farmers told: Beef must be sold at prices people can afford

MR PYM (Cambridgeshire, C), opening a debate on agriculture, said the charge the Opposition brought against the Government was that of irresponsible recklessness. said) by staking far too much oo the social compact which will prove fantastically expensive and looks in a pretty sorry mess already. (Conservative cheers.)

What we criticize and castigate this Government for the went on I is the confidence trick they are trying to play on the public. They pretend to be the friend and guardian of the consumer while the truth is they are et present only interested in the short-term effect, causing them to neglect their responsibility as a government to the long-term provision of food supplies. (Renewed Conservedve cheers.)

This attempted confidence trick on the public the said) is thoroughly reprehensible because it is trying to pretend to people they can in some way be protected from the consequences of the world price situation. They cannot. The consumer sdil has to pay one way or another.

They gave bad value for money and were already expensive under the Government's profligate pians.
They also contributed to the myth the Government sought to prop-agate—the hope of cheap food.

What they had witnessed in the past six weeks was a crescendo of collapse in confidence that would require some formidable measures to restore it require some formidable measures to restore it.

Pig farmers were going bankrapt and banks were beginning to foreclose. This was a tragedy for the young men who bad entered this industry.

How could producers have confidence to continue with the form. How could producers have confi-dence to continue with the iong-term business of beef production? Figures showed slenghtering in the last eight weeks of $0,000 tons, as compared with 24,500 tons in the same period last year. Undonbtedly (he said) part of the present trouble derives from the Government's wrecking approach to the European Commumity. The common agriculture policy was always in need of improvement. Thet is a continuous process in which Britain was playing a leading role, and over a period a more aensible and sophisticated agricultural policy would have emerged.

have emerged.

Unfair competition within the Community (he said) has nut been adjusted and cannot be adjusted further so long as the United Kingdom remains as far out of line with the rest of the Community as the Minister of Agriculture has arranged.

The farming industry was well eware of the advantages of membership and many of them regretted the transition period was not already completed.

Reasonable

MR PEART, Minister of Agri-culture, Fisheries and Food (Workingtoo, Lab), said it was no part of the Government's Intention to let market prices for beef fell to mrealistic levels. They would be watching developments closely to see what, if any, temporary measures might become necessary We want (he weot on) all the

We want (he weot on) all the beef we can get from our farms in the future end I fully accept that we must be prepared to pay reasonable prices for it. But I cannot agree that it would be right to go for market price levels that choked off consumption, as heppened only a year ago. Beet is produced tor people to eat and it must be sold at prices they can afford. afford.

He asked the feaders of the fudustry to work with him to sustain the confidence of the beef producer in this country. During the last month of the previous administration the average price of clean fat cartle at the livestock encdons was £18.25 a live cwt. Last week it was £18.50 and this week it was up again. Add on (he sald) the £2.50 of subsidies and you get a return which, given reasonable prices fur which, given reasonable prices fur-store cattle, must surely give con-fidence for the future. What is more, at these prices beef is a good buy for the bousewife— (Conservative interruptions)—and Increasing the consumption of beef is the best assurance of all for the future.

He did nut claim that the Government bad devised the pertect policy for the indefinite future. Nor bad the Community as a whole. They bad all to find a better support system for beet cone that took account not only of the producers' need for an assured ever before.

In pursuing a cheap food policy io this short-term way, the Government were harming their own cause and that of consumers cen-

In the long-term was to have a steadier price level.

for supplies at prices they could afford. He hoped to play his part io working out such a system. io working out such a system.

The Opposition would have tried to negotiate at increase of 11.5 per cent in the United Kingdom price instead of 6 per cent and would have operated intervention. He left the House to imagine what an increase of 11.5 per cent in the intervention price, coupled with the operation of permanent intervention, would have done.

Conservative policy was to take good quality beef off the market, nn a permanent basis, to force up the price the bousewife had to pay for what was left. That policy was an affront to consumers. Nor was it in the true interest of producers. (Conservative protests.) it in the true interest of arotholers. (Conservative protests.)

The main measure taken by the Community in the past few days to sustain the beef market was the linking of imports of frozen beef from third countries with the obligation to huy the same quantities from the intervention stocks. It should at least get some of the intervention stocks to the consumer, but only experience would show whether it operated as too sewere a restriction on imports or if the price set for the intervention beef was too bigh.

I reserve judgment for the present (he continued), but I shall be prepared to take this up with my colleagues in the Council of Ministers if in practice the new system works to the disadvantage of this country.

Auction prices

In the case of the pig situation the Government found on taking office that they had inherited a difficult problem which their predecessors bad done nothing to soive. So far the market had not firmed up as the industry and trade expected, although auction prices this week were encouraging, but there was still reason to believe that prices would be firmer later in the year. Meanwhile he would continue to watch the market carefully.

As for direct subsidies, ha

while he would continue to warch the market carefully.

As for direct subsidies, ha boyed that be should always be prepared to give the agricultural industry the help it needed. (Conservative interruptions.) He sometimes believed it was necessary to have a direct subsidy and if it was argued that be was egainst EEC rules and distorting competition then he believed be was right again. (Labour cheers.)

They bad firstied the farmers' unions and the other interests to discuss the long-term future of British agriculture with the Government. The aim would be to take a view over a much longer period than the one year on which they inevitably concentrated at successive annual reviews. The industry bad responded.

Livestock industry at brink of disaster

MR SPICER (West Dorset, C), fn a maiden speech, said that the farmer, faced with spiralling costs of every commodity he used, bad seen his income at best static and often falling drastically, particularly in the fast six months. The dairy, pig and beef farmers had been hardest hit. All confidence to improving the situation this year had been lost, and there were grim prospects for near year.

The minister had withdrawn the cital safety net afforded by the Community interveotion price. The Conservadves if returned to office would have negotiated last mouth an increase in that price.

MR JAY (Wandsworth, Battersea, North, Lab) said the agricultural crisis came from the abandonment of deficiency payments and guaranteed prices to comply with the EEC eccession treaty. These should be restored and all restrictions on the free immort of wheat, maize and barley abalished. Britain should be free to benefit from lower grain prices if they came. This meant freeing her from the CAP's sheckles.

MR SPENCE (Thirsk and Mahon, C) said many farmers had told him that any ideas they had bad of expansion were no longer realisds and had been abandoned.

The minister should closely monitor the merket price and guaranteed price in relation to the cost of production of the arable farmer and keep the guarantees under constant review. He should also clearly state his policy for British agriculture persurvative in British agriculture, perticularly in the livestock sector. He should aim at achieving giving the farmer an edequate return. MR CLEDWYN HUGHES MR CLEDWYN HUGHES (Anglesey, Lab) said the problems facing the industry were fargely as a result of external factors. It was wrong and unfair to charge the minister with the responsibility for these problems. Recrimination did not help the Industry. # Attack on 'trigger-happy judicial finger' of Sir John Donaldson

وتخدا صا المؤمل

House of Commons

MR FOOT, Secretary of State for Employment (Ebbw Vale. Lab), moving the second reading of the Trade Union and Labour Relations Bill, said that what they had songht to do and what be believed to be the pledge of the Labour Party to the trade union movement, was that as swiftly as they possibly could they should pass through the House, which was the only effective way of doing it, a jaw which repealed the 1971 Industrial Relations Act and restored to the trade unions the proper immunides to which they were entitled. (Labour cheers.)

He bad already said that he thought it would have been wisertor the AUEW to go to the National Industrial Relations Court, but be understood the reason why they did not do so originally. He understood their feelings, even more today. They had been sorely provoked by sequestration and the method of acquestration and what bad bappened the previous day.

In October 1970 the then Govacquestration and what bad bappened the previous day.

In October 1970 the them Government listed what they considered to be the eight central pillars of the Industrial Reladons Act which were essentially non-negotiable provisions. They were the eight pillars of tolly which had compributed so much to the dangers of the industrial situation today. Some of them could be repaired; possibly a little first-aid could be done to one or two of them. But in the main they had all contributed to the disastrona end serious deterioration in the situadon.

Crisis

The 1971 Act was sometimes defended on the ground that it was unusable and irrelevant. But time and again over the past year or two there had been a crisis, almost an industrial standstill because of the operation of the Act. At any time, some fool, or some trigger bappy judicial finger could let off a barrage. (Labour cheers.)

MR PRITER REES (Dover and MR PETER REES (Dover and Deal, C)—Is Mr Foot referring to Sir John Donaldson when he talks about "a trigger-happy judicial finger"? (Labour shouts of Yes".)

MR FOOT—In my understandlng of this House I do not believe

SIR HARMAR NICHOLLS. (Peterborough, C)—Is it to order for it to remain on the parliamentary record that a minister basaccused a judge in carrying out his duty in the courts as being trigger-happy? (Conservative cheers.) I submit that it ought to be put to him that it is in the luterests of Parliament it should be withdrawn.

The DEPUTY SPEAKER—It is not last, it would be increasingly realized that the Opposition were right in saying that the Bill would sion. It is more in the nature of a figure of speech. (Labour laughter.) It would be best to leave it long run for trade unions.

MR WHITELAW (Peurith and the Border, C)—I appreciate the emotions and do not wish to stir them. I accept that, but it must be put on record, simply because of what Labour MPs have been shouting, that Sir John Donaldson is a High Court Judge. MR FOOT-I am happy to leave Act.

it where the Deputy Speaker left
It. If none of us are entitled to use figures of speech, where would any of us be?
Nothing could be more foolish than the Tory claim that the trade unions were somehow above the law. Trade unions had bad to fight through decades and almost through decades and amost through centuries to secure laws which would protect them.

Often they had had to light against the decision of judges. And the history of trade unionism could not be told without describing how working people had had to mobilize to fight against the decisions of judges when judges had sought to twist the law to what they considered to be their advantage.

Bretyone who wanted to see peace in industry for constructive purposes could see reasons tor voting for this Bill. They stood in the cause of aettling these things by peaceful persuasion and this Bill was part of their remedy. (Lond Labour cheers.)

One-sided

MR WHITELAW (Penrith and MR WHITELAW (Penrith and the Border, Cl. moved: "That this Honse, reaffirming its belief that good industrial relations require a proper framework of law and recalling the undertaking of the previous Government to amend the Industrial Relations Act, 1971 after consultation, declines to give a second reading to a Bill which fails to secure any such proper framework of law. gives trade unious special privileges in law without corresponding responsibilities and deprives individuals of effective protection of their rights."

He said he had acknowledged that it was right that Mr Foot should bave gone to Worthing to say he thought ft would be for the AUEW to go to court. The option of going to court was open to them a long time ago. Mr Foot had made no secret of the fact that the policy of the Government was government for the fact that the policy of the Government was government for the trade unions by the trade unions. Unions were important but surely not important to the exclusion of all else.

There was a widened definition of trade disputes to include disputes over union recognition and disputes nurside Great Britain. It appeared to him that unions would be fully sheltered by Lew if they struck against other unions and would bave financing in Britain if they tried to bring pressure in respect of disputes abroad.

The Bill allowed a union to induce a breach of contract of any induce a breach of contract of any kind, not just of a contract of employment.

It means (he said) that there will be no restraint on a union blocking, picketing or blockading, not only the suppliers and customers of the employers it is tackling, but the suppliers and customers of the suppliers and customers. This is a licence for a union to du almost anything it chooses in pursuit of industrial action.

Many unions and union leaders would use their extra power, if granted under this Bill, in a responsible manner; but there would be some who would become builies in one way or another, probably against individuals. Then there would be a powerful reaction against trade unions. Essential acceptance by society as a whole would be lost.

The Bill might be superficially attractive today to the Labour. attractive today to the Labour Party and to some trade union leaders, but this satisfaction would

MRS BARBARA CASTLE, Secretary of State for Social Services (Biackburn, Lab) made a statement about the basic pension provisions of the Social Sacurity

Act, 1973.

She said: The Social Security Act is due to come into torce on April 6, 1975. But as the House knows there ere many teatures of our predecessurs' long-term pension scheme embodied in this Act which we find unacceptable; in particular the provision k makes for the ao-called "second pension" is wholly inadequate. If the Act goes forward in its present form millions of pensioners will have to supplement their pensions by means-tested assistance well into the twenty-first century. Moreover, women in general and widows in particular will be left without adequate pension coverage. Act, 1973.

At the same time I recognize At the same time i recognize that considerable preparations bave already been made—by employers, trade unions and those concerned with running occupational pension schemes—on the basis that the Act would be coming into force next April. This situation has caused the Government some difficulty. We have had two choices. On the one hand we could allow the Act to come into force next April in its present form pending the introduction of our own long-term pension proposals on which I have promised a White Paper as soon as possible and on which we would hope to legislate in the next session of Parliament. This would mean that people would be paying contributions to the Reserve Scheme for very limited pension entitlements until the scheme was replaced by our own, after no more than two or three years.

Moreover, the Government This situation has caused the

Moreover, the Government would seem to be accepting a scheme which has been widely condemned by the trade unions and in this House, and which would not provide adequately for the pension treeds of women. Alternatively, we could arrange to bring into operation only those. bring into operation only those parts of the 1973 Act provisions which would not militate against our own long term proposals.

After fullest consideration the Government have decided that the second course is the right one. Accordingly, we propose to allow the basic pension provisions of the Act to come into force on April 6, 1975 as planned, including the change to a fully earnings related contribution system, and the winding up of the graduated pension scheme, but not those provisions resident of the graduated pension scheme, but not those provisions in it which relate to the Reserve Pension Scheme and the arrangements for exemption from it. The long-term proposals which the Government will put before Parilament will include the repeal of these latter provisions: But the provisions of the Act relating to preservation of occupational pension rights will come into torce as planned. I shall shortly be making an order under the Act giving effect to the Government's decision.

I realize that this decision will affect those concerned with occupational pension schemes who have been overhauling their schemes in order to bring them into line with the recognition criteria. But the setting up of any good new occupational pension scheme or the improvement of an existing one represents a move in the right direction. And by making a clean break we shall avoid an uneasy interim period during which schemes would have bad to adapt to one set of requirements at the very time when new requirements were being worked out.

I want to make it plain that we are in favour of, and wish to encourage the development of, good occupational pension schemes which are highly valued by tha people in them. It is not our purpose to place any obstacles in the path of such schemes. which are highly valued by the people in them. It is oot our purpose to place any obstacles in the path of such schemes.

I realize also that, for the interim period before the Government's long-term pension proposals take effect, those who are not members of occupational pension schemes will lise the benefits that would have accrued from the Reserve Pension Scheme. But those, benefits would have been very small indeed for making the very small indeed for making the pension scheme in the pension of 1.5 per cent and 2 cent respectively in additional pension the pension of 1.5 per cent and 2 cent respectively in additional pension of 1.5 per cent and 2 cent respectively in additional pension of 1.5 per cent and 2 cent respectively in additional pension of 1.5 per cent and 2 cent respectively in additional pension of 1.5 per cent and 2 cent respectively in additional pension of 1.5 per cent and 2 cent respectively in additional pension of 1.5 per cent and 2 cent respectively in additional pension of 1.5 per cent and 2 cent respectively in additional pension of 1.5 per cent and 2 cent majority of employes have no further contribute cursues. For a long time the ball moved about off the pitch, and came through at varying beights. This was much to the liking of Cottam and Sarfraz, who had two wickets apiece after 75 minutes. By when Yorkshire were 34 for four. In a month's time Cottam and Sarfraz might have bowled a little straighter; but Sarfraz would never, even then, bave found a much nastier ball for Sharpe, It pitched on the middle stump and hit the off. sharpe. It pitched on the middle stump and hit the off. After one or two bandsome strokes, on a day when these were scarce, Hampshire saw a short hall from Cottam only in time to fend it off with his glove—to Strele at backward short leg. When Johnsoo was oot first ball the chances of Yorkshire getting 100, let alone Lumb, looked none too good.

Lumb is tall and fresh-faced. Hia height was a help to him yesterday in scotching anything that lifted. He is patient, too, like many a Yorkshire batsman before him. Last season he timshed up with a "pair" against Middlesex. But he hung on now, through the early troubles, and as the day wore on so the pitch became easier.

After 70 minutes Lumb had made nine, but be went along quite steadily after that, playing his best strokes, indeed, almost ail his arrokes, off his legs. It was with a four and a six to square leg, in

Steele's first over, that he went into the 90s and he had his 100 just before tea, his fourth in first-class cricket. To add only 23 in 75 minutes after that, was a little class cricket. To add only 23 in 75 minutes after that, was a little disappointing.

It was a frustrating day for Northamptonshire. First Old then Bairstow and then Hutton held them up, in company with Lumb. By taking 24 off in two overs which Mushtaq howled around one o'clock, Old first eased the pressure. He had heiped to add 62 for the fifth wicket when he was caught low down et slip by Steele, one of the best close catchers in English cricket.

Bairstow stayed while 52 were added, and then for the seventh wicket Hutton, who batted admirably, and Lumb, put on 104. By now Lumb was being rewarded for his resolution and Cottam being made to pay for baving dropped him at slip when he was one, off Sarfraz. Even with five for 67 off 27 overs Cottam could not quite make up for that. It was an irony in a way for Northamptonshire were keen and eager in the field.

Perhaps, had they had Dye they might have driven their advantage home, but he was out of it with a stiff neck. Milburn and Watts were no more than reasonably steady, and Willey la prevented from bowling these days by a troublesome knee. Willey's contribution was not inconsplcuous though. He hatted well, through the last bour, when it was the turn of Yorkshire's bowlers to find that the last bour, when it was the turn of Yorkshire's bowlers to find that Lightfoot's first product had rather lost its early sting.

Lancashire did not stand no very well to the pressure of a last wicket stand of 66 by Breakwell and Jones.
They did not seem quite to have to the no-new-hall rule, adjusted to the no-new-hall rule, which will often make it more, nor less important, to keep the fast howlers ready for the tail. Lee was. I thought, over-bowled during the afternoon, and Lever, denied the refreshment of a new ball. looked frustrated in his last spell, even howling a couple of bouncers (a houncer and a half, to be charitable) at lowes.

howling a couple of bouncers (a houncer and a half, to be charitable) at Jones.

Jones must certainly have been exceptionally irritating for the bowlers. He only really has one stroke, and whether it turns out to he a cut, a drive or a hook depends on the moment when his bat intercepts the ball. Nevertheless he swung hard and deserved his lnck. His 25 was his highest first class score. Breakwell played some truly handsome strokes, and of course he bas risen to batting occasions before. The most encouraging furnings for Somerset was that of Taylor, who opened the immings for the first time, and made 61—his highest first class score. Nudges to leg made most of his runs, but he occasionally revealed a well constructed off drive, and he clearly has the temperament for the iob. Somerset were 160 for two and, on a pitch which was slow but did not otherwise offer much to anybody, were well placed in mid-afternoon. Then both Richards and Burgess got out, both caught, playing aggressively, when they looked full of runs. I have not often seen

rescrutiny and except where most.

From 160 for two to 219 for nine was a distressing decline, but the last wicker stand gave Somerser three batting points, Lancashire taking four for bowling. Laocashire batted cautiously in the evening and needed to avainst Cartwright.

Younis and Intikhab put Surrey on top

By Peter Marson

GUILDFORD: Surrey, with five first innings wickets in hand lead Nottinghamshire by 51 runs.

Nottinghamshire by 51 runs.

Beyond a brief period in midafternoon and in the late evening yesterday, when Edrich, Younis Ahmed and Intikhab struck a handsome hlow or two for batsmen, the bowlers danced a merry jig as wickets tumbled at regular intervals. By half past two, Nottinghamshire bad been seen off by Arnold, Jackman and Potock for 85 runs. Bond, Nottinghamshire's new captain, had won the toss and had decided to bat on a pale green pitch that was soon to pose problems for his batsmen.

The bail came through slowly

lems for his batsmen.

The ball came through slowly and generally kept low. After half an hour of Harris and White it was plain to see that runs this day would be scarce, and bonus points for batting scarcer still. Harris had patiently tried to find a way out of the dilemma, but failed when Roope beld a good catch at second slip. Pifteen for one and Nortinghamshire's procession had begun. Almost at once White gently turned Jackman into Younia's hands at short leg.

It was the bour and time for the

It was the bour and time for the man, and in Sobers's rolling walk to the crease reassurance and a turn in the tide seemed to be at turn in the tide seemed to be at hand. Nor so. Arnold, who with Jackman had removed the opening pair for 17 runs, now took his sweater, with Pocock taking over from him at the pavilion end. To Pocock's fifth ball Sobers went on to the back foot, and siming to pull, fell, leg before. Calamity, so far as Nottinghamshire were concerned and undoubtedly a disappointment for a thin crowd ringing the boundaries.

Randall, by uptop les feet against

ing the boundaries.

Randall, by using his feet against Pocock and keeping a watchful eye on the rest temporarily held up Surrey's progress, and with Birch, a well hult 19-year-old new boy, put on 26 runs for the fifth wicket. But Birch was taken before Innicheou along with Bond and Larchman, and Randall, seeking to punish Pocock perished with three balls of the morning's play left. Notringthe morning's play left. Nothing-banshire were tottering now at 70 for eight from 40 overs. Surrey accomplished their task in 25 misutes afterwards. Pocock beaded the bonours list with five wickets for 30

the bonours list with five wickets for 30
Following a second outing for the heavy roller Surrey's opening pair began tentatively, and who could blame them? Yet Edrich had set his jaw and taking the bat to the ball be gave us half a dozen of the best scoring strokes we had seen in the day. These were chiefly extra cover drives to the boundary off Taylor, Stead and White. But by the time we had seen the best of Edrich, Edwards, beamtifully taken behind by Pullan's diving catch, and Howarth, leg before to Stead, bad gone for 14 runs. It had looked for a moment then as if Nottinghamshire might repsy Surrey in mind as his captain and these two held off the bowlers They had added 33 when Edrich, choosing an odd moment to thrash Latchman, was stumped with one to be bowied before rea. Youngs stayed on, occasionally hitting powerfully in partnership with Roope and was closing in on a half century when he was taken. By the close intikhab had given the batsmen's cause another lift with some lusty hitting.

It was a delicious three wood, hit straight at the stick into a declining wind from about 250 yards that hid the trick. Oosthuizen (Westaxen is something near the proounciation) is a broadshouldered hiond who hits hard and not always straight. His first hole in professional goif cost him 16 strokes; that was last year after he had won the South African Amsteur. Yesterday he started with a 30ft putt for a birdie, and be was another who drove the eighth green. He is flying back to South Africa for a couple of tournaments at the end of this week, but will return for the rest of the season.

The feature of Sauter's Security.

but will return for the rest of the season.

The feature of Sutjer's 66 was the number of holeable putts that went astray. On the outward half he missed four from no more than 6ft and one of them was only 2ft. The greens have not the smoothness yet of a summer parkiand course. Growth is always later on the Downs and the cold wind has slowed it further. But Butler usually manages to get a number in; they were not specially long until one of 40ft was gobbled up at the 16th after he had found the green with a two iron. This was such a well played round that three putts from 10st at the 14th and a six iron into a bunker at the next hole appear almost as serious blemishes.

No 2 seed forced Offstage racket kills the drama

From Rex Bellamy Tennis Correspondent Philadelphia, May 8

Philadelphia, May 8

It was a novelty. The razzamataz was fun. A crowd of more than 10,000 obviously enjoyed the show. But it was almost impossible to assess the insugural fixiure of World Team Tennis, the North American Inter-city league competition, by the standards we have come to accept. Indeed, any attempt to do so would be spurious. As with most critical exercises, only three questions demand answers. What is the purpose of it all? Is that purpose worth while? How effectively is it being achieved?

The purpose of the kind of con-

being achieved?

The purpose of the kind of contest in which the Philadelphia Freedoms bear the Pittsburgh Triangles by 31 games to 25 here last evening was to demonstrate that, by tossing the conventions saide and creating an entirely new concept of tennis, it is possible to establish a commercially profitable team sport appealing to local pride at every level of the community.

As for the achievement of its purpose, WTT can take heart from the obvious success of this spectacular first fixture. But the tennis fell below the known potential of the players in action and it is doubtful if even the rabid sports entima-lasts of North America will give such occasions the persistently massive support the promotional such occasions

The number of games won is the decisive factor in the new league. So the players can never afford to relax. Each " match" consists of two sets. The game has been stripped of the crises which punctuate the pattern of conventional scoring. The dominant theme is the team scores, with the overall position announced after every game. game.

Evoune Goolagong pur Pitts-burgh ahead by playing beautifully to take a set 6-2 from Sillie Jean King, who later confessed she was nervous. But Brian Fairlie pleased the home crowd with the solid assurance of his 7-2 success over Ken Rosewall, who struggled in vain to find his touch. Inlie Anthony produced some exciting tennis in partnering Fred Stolle to a 7-6 advantage over Isabel Fern-andez:

In the second half Mrs King struck form to subdue Miss Goolagong 6-2, Rosewall showed a glimpse of majesty by winning the last five games to master Fairlia 6-3 and Miss Authory and Stolle won e 6-3 ser against Gernlaitis and his new partner, Peggy Michael, who replaced Miss Pernandez.

Cherlic Bubbles, the winner of the Tote Free Handicap at Newmarket already this spring, will hook his place in the Derby field if as I expect he wins the Dee Stakes at Chester this afternoon. His is an interesting test. He is opposed by Angels Two who rankway with the Nell Gwyn Stakes at Newmarket three weeks ago but she is penalized for having won a pattern race whereas Chartie Bubhles is not and that means that she will be meeting him on 4 lb worse terms than if this were a level weights affair, hearing in mind the weight for sex allowance.

Pop Song won his first and only race at Ascor by bearing Assembly Point but it is questionable whether that performance was as praiseworthy as Charlie Bubbles's zame effort at Newmarket. Charlie Bubbles is by Walver Hollow who won the Eclipse Stakes. Mistigri, the sole Irish challenger, won at Phoenix Park in the autumn, but he bas not run this spring and confidence in his ability will not have been increased by the failure of his stable companion, Meadow Moss, as Chester on Tuesday.

Freefoot, the winner of the John Porter Stakes at Newbury, ought to win the Ormonde Stakes, a prire that his trainer. Harry Wragg, has won with Ormindo and Sovrango. Lester Piggott's judgment, riding Freefoot at Newbury last month, was as near to perfection as one could wish. # Three Lions go down with gastric trouble

Stilfontein, May 8.—As the Bridsh Lions held their first official practice in South Africa today, illness kept two players off the field and forced a third to leave halfway through. The Lions, who arrived in Johaoueshurg yesterday for a 12-week tour, were without Windsor and Rees when they began training in this south-west Trans-

Windsor was in a Johannesburg Windsor was in a Johannesburg bospital with gastroenteritis contracted on the flight from England, and Rees remained at the team's lotel, seemingly with the same complaint. He beaved himself out of his hospital bed, dressed and said: "I just can't wait to get into a big hospital bed, dressed and said: "I just can't wait to get into a big steak."

The practice was not too strenuous, since Alun Thomas, the tour manager, does not want to push his players overmuch until they adjust to the South African climate. Sid Millar, the coach, puth his men through physical exercises. Relatively light though training was, the players were short of breath when they left the pitch.

This was put down to the high altitude of the Transvaal, which is several thousand feer above sea

The five were Millar (coach), McBride, Edwards, Neary and McLauchlan. The Lious play their first match against Western Transvaal in Porchefstroom a week today; the first international is in Cape Town on June 8.

Newspapers were full of news of the team's arrival, and dwelt on Windsor's illness. Two in Johanneshurg published large front page photographs—one in colour—of him lying in bis hospital bed. Chris Finnegan will he only 20 on June 5, and yet someone asked him during training yesterday whether he would redire if he lost his return bout against John Conteh for the light-heavyweight titles of Europe, Britain and the Commonwealth, at Wemhley on May 21.

Finnegan's manager, Mr Sam Burns, explained that neither he nor his tiger were even contemplating the possibility of defeat so that the matter was hard to discuss. Mr Burns was much happier to offer us the thought that "Chris will knock his man out", which was surprising, as well as ambitions, offer us the thought that "Cbris mill knock his man out", which was surprising, as well as ambitious, since Finnezan has only ever scored one clean knock-our in the whole of his career of 32 professional houts.

Watching Finnegan spar five hard rounds, three of them with his brother, Kevin, who challenges for the European middleweight title later this month, I thought he seemed to he anchoring himself more to the canvas finding a firmer base from which to hit powerfully. Freddie Hill, his trainer and the proprietor of the gymnasiom of the "Larender Hill Mob" above the Craven Arms, agreed. But Finnegan, cooling down with a hot cup of tea, felt: "I'm just doing what comes naturally. I'm not conscious of any real change."

The Finnegan camp is tolerably polite about Couteb, which is reasonable enough, since in their later that moment, like a man with any retirement plans at all.

Conteh was a good winner on points. But Finnegan does not agree with Conteh's own assessment of being twice the fighter he was. "He's been put down or shaken or made heavy weather in several of his fights recently. I wouldn't have sald he'd come on too well, matured, and all that, He's a good puncher, I know. But he never made me think I was going to go down. As a hitter, he's not in the same category as Boh Foster. Io fact, I think I could be the better, the improved lighter, this time hecause I've had a nice loog rest from the ring."

Finnegan thinks that the first contest with Corteh was the third hard.

England into semi-final after extra time

From Sydney Friskin Madrid, May 8

England 2 Wales 1 A jubilant party of England's A jubilant party of England's supporters almost drained the Ciub de Campo of its supply of champagne here today. There was good reason to celebrate for England, by beating Wales in extra time, reached the semi-final round of the European Cop bockey fournament. England also made sure of a place in the third World Cup event to be held in Malaysia next March.

Cup event to be held in Malaysia next March.

But there was little sparkle in a game which England could have rucked away comfortably by half-time. Both sides are capable of better stuff and were perbaps a little overawed by the gravity of the occasion. A sombre looking Frenchman said to me after the match: "We were not amused. You can quote me if you like."

England started off at a fast pace, in a match that began al noon, sparing neither the opposition nor themselves. The heat was so intense that one began to wonder whether the pace could he sustained.

wonder whether the pace could be sustained.

Perhaps there is some truth in the saying that only mad dogs and Englishmen go out in the midday sun. And there seemed to be a touch of madnes in Eogland's 'during assaults which undermined the confidence or the Welsh defence in the first 15 minutes. England had done the right thing by spreading their allacks and thus circumvening Wilson, 2 tower of strength in the Welsh defence.

Yet England survived a crisis in the seventeenth minute with Pinks saving on the line after Parsons had put every ounce of energy into a hit from a loog corner. Two short corners in favour of England led to scrambles inside the circle, and to the twenty-first minute they took a well deserved lead. First French raced through on the right with Parsons challenging from behind. His desperate tackle earned England a short corner from which Long's shot hit the back of the boards with a bang. No sound was sweeter to English brck of the boards with a bang, No sound was sweeter to English ears, but Wales hit back with a fine run by Foulkes, whose cross pass went astray.

England should have increased their lead about a minute before balf-time from a chance superfuly created by Cotton. He took the hall deep and, controlling it beautifully on the line, backpresed to Long, who swent at it avidly and to Long, who swept at it avidly and just missed the mark.

After the interval Wales brought in Marsb to replace May and the change was for the better as it had been in previous matches. Welsh attacks became sharper and more fluent and in the first 10 minutes

Shackles that preserve Brazil's image of tranquillity

uninvoived citizens plucked at random off the streets of Rome, but of men who have spent a great deal of their lives in conflict with right-wing governments. There was Sr Juan Bosch the ex-president of the Domin-iran Republic, for example, and an ex-ambassador in the Allende Administration.

But the evidence brought forward was distressingly familiar—torture by electric shock, beatings, mntilations and mysterious disappearances, the sort of eccusatinos that a reporter bears constantly when trav-elling through those republics.

The Brazilian Government, with its largely successful attempts to create an image abroad of tranquillity and progress in order to attract foreign capital, reacts smartly whenever such accusations appear, and they heve continued to appear regularly since the military took over in 1964 the military took over io 1964. lu a letter to The Times on March 14, Bishop Butler and others wrote that "rarely in recent history has the legalized supression of civil liberties anywhere been more thorough". imagination. Shr Costa, while also dismissing the other charges, drew the bishop's attention to part of a speech made in January by General Geisel, the son of poor German immigrants who had just been inaugurated as the new president. The general gave a warning that Brazil, now part of international affairs, could not escape the difficult phase that the world was facing, particularly the "undisciplined violence, destructive and irrational, which is undermining the bastions of society". There would, he said, have to be a studied and pragmatic sense of priorities in a manner that did not sacrifice tomorrow in favour of immediate bene-

One false, Jurid tale in a Paris newspaper does not, of course, prove that stories of torture are untrue, while the oew president would seem to be suggesting that, after 10 years of military rule, Brazil is still not ready to allow its people their traditional freedoms and is determined not to pause in its race to get rich quickly. Reforms will have to

Undoubtedly the country is getting rich; everything else is secondary. Brazilian diplomats abroan all seem to be economists, reeling off endless statistics, their eyes gleaming with pride. There bas been, without doubt, torture in Brazil during the past 10 years, but the military line has been that it was never official policy. Amnesty International and the Amnesty International and the Roman Catholic hierarchy have both published evidence, and the former gave the figure of 1,000 people alleged to have been tornured between 1968 and 1972. Now and then a trial is allowed to be reported in the censored newspapers in which policemen are charged with and found guilty of mrturing prisoners.

The opinion of many mainly professional Brazilians, when I talked to them last November hefore the new president had been inaugurated, was that many unpleasant acts bad taken place and there was little opposition left for the military to worry about. Thet cruel period, thought, was probably

There was optimism among there was optimism among those who remembered with enthusiasm the more democratic days, albeit less efficient, when the politicisms were in power, that perhaps General Geisel might move towards restoring some freedoms. Each of the three wasterness. the three military presidents since 1964—Castelo Branco. since 1964—Castelo Branco, Costa e Silva and Medici—had all promised to restore democracy but not one of them attempted to bring it about. There are no signs that General

The military has imprisoned dissidents, imposed censorship and held trials of political prisoners in correct to control to the control of the under emergency acts which gives it unlimited power, and it has created a government party (and a token opposition), which (and a token opposition), which antomatically elects the man the military selects. This denial of free expression inevitably brings examples of ingenuity, absurdity and audacity. Anxious not to give too much emphasis to the coup d'etat in Chile last October, the censor instructed the news-papers not to use beadlines. Journal do Brasil got around that by using no headlines and running the news in four columns from the top of the front page to the bottom. A love song with the refrain, "In spite of with the refrain, "In spite of you" was banned, since too many people were singing it about the government. And a Frenchman made his own private protest in the streets of Sao Paulo last year with completely blank banners. He explained to the police that he wanted Brazilians to ask questions and create in their minds slogans for the banners.

the two approaches demonstrate the dilemma facing not only London Transport but other industries which have been helped in the past by cheaper immigrant workers and where labour is now short. London Transport, like the hospital service, would suffer chaos were it not for immigrant workers. To overcome previous shortages London Trensport re-cruited over 4,000 West Indians, the vast majority from Barbados, from 1956 until the squeeze on immigration in the late 1960s.

The scheme was well organ-ized. Barbadian government officials, with knowledge of the sort of people required, selected them in Barbados and lent money for their air fares,

Time now for Ulster to assert its independence

The one certain fact about Northern Ireland is that things are getting worse not better.
Despite the efforts of successive British Governments and Secretaries of State and thanks olics, than at any time since

Hugh Munro recently suggested that the options were Irisb Unity or Chaos; and Irisb Unity or Chaos; and many people this side of the Irisb Sea would welcome unity if only because a few miles of sea seems a sensible sorr of frontier, while nearly 300 miles of field, bog and woodland does of tield, bog and woodland does not. Unbappily this thesis ignores the plain and obvious fact that nearly a million Ulstermen were willing to fight to prevent Dublin rule before the First World was and would the First World war and would unquestionably do so again if the threat were ever posed. Such a suggestion, if implemented, would thus convert a possible civil war in the United Kingdom into a near-certain civil war in the Republic .

The classic contention of the south is that the 32 counties form a geographical enrity, which should form a political whole; but as Conor Cruise O'Brien courageonsly pointed out in his States of ireland there is no warrant to support

Peninsula, for example, has a sharply defined integrity, yet nobody suggests Portugal should be ruled by Spain After nearly three centuries of independence it was taken over pendence it was taken over pendence it was taken over briefly from 1581 to 1640; that briefly from 1581 to 1640 : that period is now termed "the 60 years captivity". Yet despite the Republic's acceptance of Ulster's status in the 1925 Treary (which is incidentally binding under the Treaty of Rome) their 1937 Constitution explicity laid claim to the Six Counties in Articles 2 and 3. This is bitterly resented by almost all Ulstermen; and, notwithstanding the present Taoiseach's handsome pro-nouncement on the subject, deep suspicion of the Republic's motives will remain, driving two-thirds of the population to adopt a "British" stance, not so much out of innate love of Britain as in self-defence. But if the Irish bave dis-played lack of imagination here, future and leave Ulstermen, subject to joint guarantees and an entrenched constitution, to rebuild their own country with the raison d'être of both IRA and UVF removed? Their beautiful land has been fur far too long the cockpir of an ill-concealed, outdated Anglo-Irish rivalry and enough is enough.

Of all the options canvassed

Ulster independence is tha least popular—appealing to nnly 4 per cent of the electorate at the last public opinion poll-but that is not th say that it is ridiculous, simply that is bas never been seriously con-sidered. Yet there is an eminently respectable precedent in the history of Belgium. In 1815 the Congress of Vienna, in But if the Irish bave displayed lack of imagination here, we have also. Over the years our attitude seems to have been "Ireland was once part of the United Kingdom: 26 Counties opted out, but that is no reason why anyone else should". This lofty posture drives the remaining third of the population into an "Irish" stance, again as a defence mechanism. Thus both Dublin and London bava pursued lines calculated to accentuate Northern Ireland the Congress of Vienna, in nrder to remove the Low Countries from France's sphere of influence, ceded Belgium to The Northerlands, but this arrangement failed in work because of the bostility between the Northern Flemish Protestants ("Orangemen") and the Southern Walfoon Catholics; and extensive civil disturbances took place. Here you have all the ingredients of the Ulster situation—racial, allied to religious and cultural, cleavage

Akhough no one expected

the small country to survive as an independent entity, once the two communities, deprived of either Nordic or Latin support, had in live together to survive, they did so with a minimum of friction. Indeed with the pasfriction. Indeed with the passage of time a wider unity, the Beneiux Federation, has come into being. Would it not then be possible in restore e unity within a diversity by working for en English-speaking Benelux within the EEC consisting of an independent Britain Ireland. an independent Britain, Ireland and Ulster wich a Council of the British Isles? Such a body would be much less emotive to an Ulster Protestant, than that envisaged at Summingdale. In practice no ne of value between Ulster and the United Kingdom would be broken any more than would any link with the Republic. In prove this, it is only necessary to point out that no British interest bas been damaged by the Republic's coming into being. An Englishman lishman can stall settle in Dublin, run a business, be elected to the Dail, send his children to school in England, then into the service of the Crown, if he so chooses: sami-

moreover perfectly possible for a peer to serve in the legisla-tures of both England and Ireland simultaneously and one indeed does so. Joint reciprocal citizenship, therefore, could ensure that Ulstermen continned to enjoy all rights in whatever part of the old United Kingdom they chose to live.

So, far from weakening the new Ulster power-sharing execnew Ulster power sharing executive—the one positive achievement of the past six tortured years—the severing of formal ties with both London and Dublin should serve to strengthen it by the links, both formal and informal that would grow in their place.

There would remain the question of defence, and here both the United Kingdom and the Republic would have to help, preferably as a joint operation, for a number of years by policing the border, which would need to remain if only to prevent the smuggling of kvestock. But it should be a shortened and simplified border, since the old county boundaries have and simplified border, since the old county boundaries have neither geographical nor ethnic relavance. In a spirit of give and take, then, Cathnlic salients in Armagh, Fermanagh and Tyrone should be handed to the Republic and the predomiborder and can only be crossed dry-shod at 15 places instead of anywhere along the existing one in this sector. Recognition of a sensible frontier by all concerned seems a better way of taking it out of politics than having a Referendum every 10 years and endemic civil war in

Anyone who goes to Twickenham or Landsowne Road must sense that more things unite Englishmen end Irishmen than Englishmen end Irishmen than divide them, and might well conclude that the Anglo-Irish quartel is one that should never have been. Yet always at the heart of the dispute has been the question of Ulster and the dispute has been the question of Ulster and the dispute has been the question of Ulster and the dispute has been the question of Ulster and the dispute has been disputed to the dispute has been disputed to the disputed t been the question of Ulster and its identity. Might it not be best for all parties if Belfast asserted that identity in independence with the full concurrence and support of both London and Dublin? This proposal accords more with this realities of the Ulster situation than either integration with the United Kingdom or with the United Kingdom or with the Republic; but is the one option available that bas never been given consideration.

The best substitutes are sunflower oil, vegetable oils— and the kind of soft margarine bigh in poly-unsaturated fats. We should cut fat from meat, drink milk instead of cream and eat only three eggs a week. Eggs are high in cholesterol. Experiments, we were told, are under way to produce an egg low in cholesterol, taking some fat out of the yolk and replacing lt with sunflower oil. There were even sinister hints

White plague
Similar dark hints were dropped by Stamler when we met him early next morning. He spoke of "underground propeganda" by the dairy industry. "They don't like us", he said. "We make them very nervous." Consequently, he claimed, the dairy people had falsified his case. They accused him of advocating a diet excessively high in crucial distinction.

In the early days, soon after the link between saturated fats and heart disease was first mooted, over-enthuiastic exponents would, said Stamler, drink whola jiggers of corn oil. "This is patently absurd but this is what the dairy industry has accused us of advocating. And the egg people do the same and to a lesser extent the meat people." In an ironic echn of the languaga of the McCarthy era, he said: "We have never been and are not now advocates of a high pelynnsaturated fats diet."

Stamler—small, bald and talkative—is a great enthusiast for his subject. Heart disease, he tnid us, is an epidemic in the United States. The first of the mass of statistics be gave us was

"The people who have beart attacks and are ungenteel enough not to drop dead anmediately—they're the real problem." At the moment the disease affects mostly men but its incidence among women is grow-ing. Stamler balieves this is due ing Stamler balleves that is due to the increase of cigarette smoking among women and also perhaps to the use of the contraceptive pill. There is tentative evidence, he said, that the pill could be a contributory factor.

Le Havre: making a factory in a port

by Michael Frenchman

A few miles to the north of Le Havre is a cluster of houses, a farm or two and some old harns which make up the village of Antifer. Below the white cliffs a buge breakwater creeps out towards the Needles and Britain. When completed it will shelter the million-too tankers which will but their way up the Channel to the coast of Normandy.

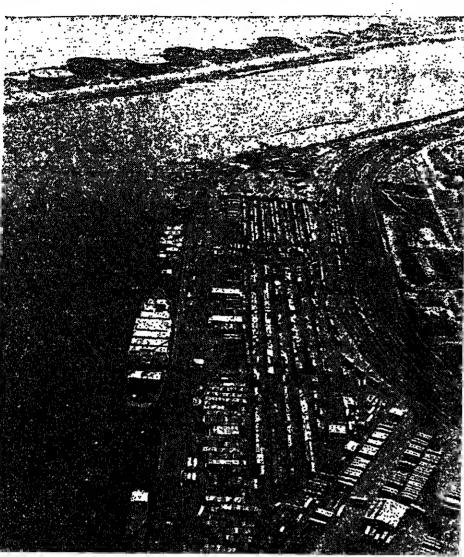

Antifer will become one of Europe's largest oil terminals and the newest addition to the port of Le Havre. Situsted at the mouth of the Seine, which winds its way to the coast from Paris, this town is one of France's most important export outlets.

With vigorous determina-tion and an eye to the future M P. Bastard, director-general of the port authority, has succeeded in making it has succeeded in making it more than just a port. Apart from the miles of wind-swept concrete wbarves, deepwater berths, roll-on, roll-off facilities and ferry terminals there are vast industrial areas already being occupied by a wide range of industries—car factories corners and car factories, cement and plastics companies, refineries

As M I. Thillard, president of the port authority, says:
"We bave tried to make a factory in a port and to put a ship in the factory."

As with all French ports there is considerable rivalry over statistics. Feeling runs especially high between Le Havre and Marseilles, France's other major export corridor outlet.

In 1972 Marseilles took 84,400,000 toos of cargo compared with 66,400,000 toos at Le Havre, which handled the fourth largest amount of goods through any European port. The first was Rotterdam with 260 million tons and Antwerp had 67 million tons

The Rhone: most important traffic link

When you fly along the Rhône valley, between Lyons and the sea, the majestic river seems empty and the country between Marseilles and Lyons industrially deserted, while the winding Seine between Paris and the sea is teeming with barge

There are three main axes of traffic in France, the Seine, the Rhône and the French Rhine. Of the three, pipeline, the Rhône is by far the most important. But while on the Seine axis, 40 per cent of the traffic goes water, on the Rhône axis only 3 per cent is waterborne.

For 2,000 years the Rhône bas been the axis of com-munication between the Mediterranean and the North Sea. But in the last century, first the railway, then the road took over. Navigation of the Rhöne never really existed in the modern sense, M Max Moulin, president of the Compagnie Nationale du Rhône, said. The organization was set up in 1921 to make the international size, up to 2,500 tons, to produce hydro-electricity to finance the canal work, and to irrigate

By the end of 1977, the once capricious river, with its seasons of floods and low water which, as in the past three years, sometimes stops traffic altogether for one or two mooths, will be tamed along the whole 190-mile stretch from Lyons to the sea. By the same time, the Saone, above Lyoos to Chelon and Villefranche, will also have been opened to heavy barge traffic. France will then boast an international waterway, reaching 280 miles from the Mediterranean into the heart of Europe, and capable of taking convoys of barges up to 5,000 tons. One harge train on the Rhône will carry as much as a hundred 30-ton trucks at a third of the cost a ton-kilometre. Exceptionally beavy road convoys which require special police arrangements, fike the 270-ton hydroelectric power plant bulb sets produced by Alsthom in the Lyons area and exported all over the world, will be abla to go by water.

The saving in pollution, in accidents and lives, will also be considerable. One of the nonsenses of the present situation, before the Rhone situation, before the knone becomes really navigable to beavy barges, is that the heavy industry of St Etienne, Le Creusot, Montcean-les-Mines and Burgundy, is within earshot of the river but derives no benefit from it.

When the canalization of Wheo the canalization of the Rhône was launched in 1934 with the construction of the Edouard Herriot port in the southern suburb of Lyons, there was no question of the tion of Shell, BP, and the of Fos. But when work older refineries in the area began at Fos in 1962, the is to match Esso's boast that importance of the Rhône you can drink the cooling axis was immediately obvious in terms of the industrial water that comes out of the ous in terms of the industrial refinery in that it will be cleaner than what want in.

Our scheduled services to Paris from London Airport Gatwick now touch down at Charles de Gaulle Airport—the newest and most modern in Europe. Our One-Elevens jet across the Channel four times a day, Monday to Saturday, and we've three flights on Sunday. Ask your travel agent for details. Or contact our nearest office.

Midland's international operation is unusual.

It's designed to offer you the same solid support everywhere.

In other words, unlike some banks, we believe that 2 or 3 branches in a country just aren't good enough.

So we looked for a number of large European banking organisations who shared this thinking.

And together with six of them, we've set up European Banks International

(EBIC), a group which amounts to something of a European economic community in itself.

This makes it possible for you to deal through one bank, the Midland, for everything anywhere in Europe.
It also gives you a means of raising money fast all over the place.

Your Midland manager can arrange money for you to draw on immediately from any one of almost 9,000 branches in Europe. And he can do it from his own desk through our unique Ebicredit arrangements.

In short, the same complete service Midland Bank provides to business in the UK is now available to Midland customers throughout Europe.

That's a lot more than a lot of other banks can do.

If you bank with the Midland, you're in business in Europe.

The departure of these three leaders coincides with many other signs that the European Community is disintegrating, the most recent of which is the unilateral introduction of import surcharges by the Italian government last ek. Italy's economic and political problems are the most acute in any country of the Community, and for some time at any rate there is most unlikely to be an Italian government strong enough to give a lead in Europe. The new British government might have given a lead, but was too divided about the desirability of belonging to the Community at all to be able to do so.

A man with those views will not find it easy to reach an understanding with any French President, but since those views in any case form the real basis—as opposed to the rbetoric—of all West German foreign policy, it is probably as well that they should be frankly stated.

It might be thought that Herr Schmidt would prefer to have his fellow-socialist M Mitterrand in the Elysée. In fact, as a rightwing socialist in a deeply anticommunist country, he views the French Socialist Communist alliance with suspicion, while on a personal level he gets on better with his fellow finance minister, M Giscard d'Estaing. It may be as well, therefore, that the latter is now the favourite to win the French presidential race. He too is an unsentimental man, and though less "Atlantic "than Herr Schmidt he has no ideological prejudice against the United States. From Professor Alan Thompson Sir, The Prime Minister's assurance, in his speech on May 5, that oil devel-opments would not be "at the expense of the Scottish countryside' will be greatly welcomed in planning and amenity circles in Scotland. and amenity circles in Scotland. There was grave concern at the Drumbule Inquiry that the evidence given by the DTI (later the Department of Energy) was based largely on the views of the contractors, and gave inadequate attention to total planning requirements, environmeotal factors, the cost of infra-struc-ture, and coordination with the work of the local authority. The developers are, admittedly, not bound to consider environmental factors. Indeed, they may put them-selves at a disadvantage with compeutors if they speed too much mone; on environmental planning. It is precisely because of this fact that a government department should in-clude these considerations in its brief.

My own view is that Drumbuie will reveal three major needs. First, we should have a master plan (in the form of a written policy statement) for on-shore oil developments, involving a much wider range of planning considerations than those presented to the Drumbuie Inquiry by sented to the Drumbule inquiry by the developers and by the DTI. The overwhelming lesson of Drumbuie, bowever, is that the inquiry system should not be abolished, although it should be possible to incprove its efficience by streamlining the procedure. Any new legislation must retain some period of public scrutiny, professional cross-examination and impartial judgment.

Drumbuie has shown how the most authoritative and impressive-sounding expert evidence can be shaken by detailed public interrogation. The prospect of such interrogation serves to dissuade the experts from cutting to dissuade the experts from cutting corners or adjosting their statistics. Drumbuie confirms the wisdom of Parliament over 25 years of legislation in the field of planning, in making the public inquiry system the central safeguard of the citizens rights. Any system of compulsory purchase which ignores these rights such as a possible land acquisition.

Shared schools in Ulster

From Professor D. J. Anderson Sir, Is any bope for Northern Ireland or indeed Christianity discernible in the reaction to proposals for Pro-testant and Catholic school sharing, reported in The Times on May 1? A Catholic diocesan official expressed donbts attributed by him to the "Catholic conscience on education" which presumably is a great deal sharper than the Catholic conscience on other matters of public concern in the province.

Having been brought up as a Catholic and still clinging desperately to a kind of Catholicism in spite of many of my coreligionists and other fellow Christians in Northern Ireland, I must ask what clear benefits can be shown to derive from education in what is commonly called a Catholic atmosphere? Parishes up and down the land are burdened with the cost of Catholic schools within the state system and individuals pay for their children to go to Catholic private and public schools because they are told that it is their duty. But I suggest that the record of Catholic schools measured in terms of numbers of those who abandon Catholicism after leaving school is poor, and I helieve that this is true even among Catholic boarding schools where the Catholic atmosphere bas the best possible opportunity of permeating the developing mind. The figures may be available, or would not be difficult

What about the record of Catholic schools in producing Catholics who are also real Christians? Are the products of Northern Irisi. Catholic schools significantly different from those of non-Catholic schools by any yardstick? There is no evidence that they are significantly more eager to forgive those who trespass against them, more tolerant, bonest, otherworldly, gentle, humble; even that they are less blood-thirsty than others. If there is a sectarian murder, an event we now accept, although it ought to be unthinkable among Christian neighbours, is the group educated in a Catholic atmosphere more reluctant than any other to reach for the avenging gun, or are their leaders more anxious to denounce such horrors?

Yet as though still in another age, Catholic religious leaders continue to urge asgregated education on their flock. Do they really feer that Catholic children brought up side by side with Presbyterians or woatever, will he infected with some deadly beresy when in fact they might learn to live together in peace? Mean-while, parents like myself see our children one after another leaving Catholicism not for Protestant beresy but for disillusionment with brands of official Christianity. Yours faithfully,

It was left to Herr Brandt to face the German people with the real consequences of the war, the division of the nation into two states, and the permanent loss of the eastern territories. He did this not only against the emotional reluctance of the older generation hut in the teeth of opposition from the Christian Democrats. Only a man with great courage, real feeling for the attrocities committed against the Slav nations, and above all enjoying the full trust of his western allies, could have done it. Herr Brandt did, and by doing so enabled his country to atone at least in part for its history while simultaneously freeing east-west diplomacy from the paralysing constrictions of the German question, thereby making possible the

There has been some progress but not as much as some people expected, and the disappointment has contributed to the declining popularity of the party. But no other policy could have achieved more, and the long-

Inflation has imposed severe stresses, though West Germany has coped with them better than most countries, and the left wing of the party has been slipping into the hands of naive theorists who have alienated not only floating voters but many of the party faithful. Return to gold standard From Mr Edward Holloway service by raising the question of a return to gold. It is now 50 years since the great controversy on the proposal to return to the gold standard was at its height. A Treasury memorandum accompanying the Gold Standard Bill summartheir reasons for accepting gold:

"Whatever its imperfections, gold for centuries commanded the confidence of the civilized world and bas-continued to command it. If the gold standard fails to give complete stability, its adoption is nevertheless the most simple and direct method of obtaining a high degree of stability."

Wieston Churchill, then Chercel.

Winston Churchill, then Chancellor of the Exchequer, expressed doubts as to the wisdom of a return to gold. Keynes and McKenna advocated managed money as an alternative, but the combined influence of Montagu Norman. Otto Niemeyer and others proved too strong. Britain returned to gold at the prewar parity on April 28, 1925.

But the "high degree of stability But the "high degree of stability" which the supporters of the gold standard envisaged proved illusory. The deflation which tollowed proved disastrous, leading to the General Strike of 1926, the spectre of poverry in the midst of plenty, and a total of three million unemployed by 1930. The effects of the poisoning of industrial relations which then took place remain with ua to this day.

In the House of Commons on April 21, 1932, Winston Churchill, in the Eudget debate, referred to the arguments and forces which had led to the return to gold in 1925. He said: "Are we really going to accept the position that the whole future development of science, our organization, our increasing cooperation and the fruitful era of peace and goodwill among men and nations; are all these developments to be arbitrarily barred by the price of gold? Is the progress of the buman race in this age of almost terrifying expansion to be arbitrarily barred and regulated by fortuitous terrifying expansion to be arbitrarily barred and regulated by fortuitous discoveries of gold mines bere and there or by the extent to which we can persuade the existing cornerers and boarders of gold to put their hoards again into the common stock? Are we to be told that buman civilization and society would have been impossible if gold had not havened to be an element would have been impossible it gold had not happened to be an element in the composition of the globe?"

Mr Rees-Mogg's argument that a gold base for mooey supplies a much needed discipline on the structure of credit is undoubtedly true. But need we have recourse to such an arbitrary discipline which is unrelated to the needs of the is unrelated to the needs of the economy? Surely reality and stabi-lity demand that money should not lity demand that money should not be related to one commodity—gold—but to a wide range of commodities. As long ego as 1920 Irving Fisher proposed that the United States should adopt a "commodity dollar"; since then there have been many advocates of this idea. Instead of going back to a gold standard, we should be moving forward to a commodity standard, with money based on the goods and services which alone give money its value. which alone give money its value. Yours faithfully.

Retired civil servants From Mr Frank Logan

Sir, The issues raised by Sir William Armstrong's acceptance of an appointment with the Midland Bank three months after his retirement from the public service deserve fuller discussion than they have yet

If this appointment is allowed to go through, it is difficult to see any grounds on which senior civil ser-vaots could in future be refused permission to take up lucrative business appointments on or soon after retirement. At a time of declining standards in public life, it is vital that those at the top of the civil service should not only be able to give absolutely unbiased advice to their Ministers but that they should be seen, as far as this can be arranged, to be under the temptation to do to be under no temptation to do otherwise. This is infinitely more important than the temporary nocavailability of a teriring civil servant's expertise to the business

The present rule that requires civil servants wishing to take up such appointments within two years of retirement to obtain the cousent of the Minister concerned is wholly inadequate. At the very least there should be a suitable committee, perhaps presided over by a senior Privy Councillor not a member of the Government of the day, to consider and advise on such cases. ours faithfully, FRANK LOGAN. As from Rusbam End, Shalford, Surrey.

Subsidies for the arts From the Vice-Chancellor of Bristol

University Sir, As Chairman of the Bristol Old Vic Trust I was much impressed by the letter you published last week from Mr Patrick Gibson, Chairman of the Arts Couocil, asking that the Government should give as much help as it can in this extraordinarily difficult time for the arts.

To make no hones about it, the Bristol Old Vic would simply not exist today with a world-wide reputation for its standards of drama had it not been for the enlightened patronage of the Arts Council over the years. The greater part of our income comes from our audiences paying for their seats—as indeed it should—and happily nearly a quarter of a million did so last year. But the subvention we get from the Arts Conneil eoables us to put on dramatic entertainment in our three theatres of a quality which would be quite unattainable without that support.

When economies bave to be made, as indeed they must in our theatres in these difficult times, it is always the quality of the artistic production which suffers most, simply because theatres bave inescapable overbead costs which rise like everything else. In such circumstances even quite small economies can produce quite disproportionate effects in quality. And once standards have deteriorated, as Mr Gihson so rightly says, they are difficult if not impossible to racover. Yours faithfully,

ALEC MERRISON, Chairman, Bristol Old Vic Trust, The University, Senate House, Bristol.

Pakhtuns in Afghanistan

From Mr Nahi Misdag Sir, Your editorial of May 1 "Pakistan means more than Pakhtunistan"—raises many issues. May i as an Afghan be allowed to comment on some of them?

1. Ever since the creation of Pakistan, it has been the policy of Afghan governments that Pakistan should be persuaded to agree to a referendum, allowing the people of Pakhtunistan to decide for themselves whether they want (a) to remain with Pakistan, (h) to create an autonomous state, or (c) to join Afghanistan.

2. The United Narions and other independent sources indicate that 64 per cent (not, as you state, 40 per cent) of the Afghan population is Pakhtun. The Pakhto speakets have always been and still are the major and dominant group in Afghanistan. It is not for numerical reasons, as your leader makes out, that successive Afghan governments have been asking for the right of self-determina-tion for the Pakhtuns of the NWFP. 3. You mention the "Sbia Hazaras of the north" (who actually live in central Afghanistau) and imply that they have been unfairly treated by the "rulers of Kabul". This is in fact a criticism applicable to all modern governments. The bureau-crats in almost all capitals tend to neglect outer regions and provinces, Kabul not being an exception to tha rule.

Yours sincerely, NABI MISDAQ, 2 Marcham Road. Leytoustone, E11.

Ink with everything

From the Director of the Society of British Printing Ink Manufacturers Sir, Everyone engaged in the printing ink industry is familiar with juaing ink industry is raminar with juatifiable complaints about ink rubbing off from newspapers but the novel auggestion by Vice Admiral Sir David Clutterbuck (May 3) that the ink actually "off-sets" on to bot fish, offers intriguing possibilities to the creative mind.

Does it not suggest, for example, a most convenient and palatable way in which politicians and economic journalists might be induced to eat their words? Is there the prospect of a new art form arising, as emerprising fish-friets produce, from the pages of your more popular contemporaries, pieces of hot cod as sought after as Pirelli calendars—and for similar reasons? Shall we sea the makers of printing inks—a hitherto respectable enough body of men—entering the advertising lists to make entering the advertising lists to make wild claims about added viramins, subtracted calories and a subtle hint

Alas for fantasy! The prosaic fact is that food must be wrapped with wrapping material on which the prioring is on the outside of the wrapper and for which the ink has heen specifically formulated with non-toxic materials. Food for thought must be separated from food for body thus avoiding any possi-bility of contamination.

hlakers of news inks do give coutinuing and serious thought to the problem of rub-off and indeed, many local newspapers no longer rub off in this way at all. As far as the national press is concerned, however, it is economic difficulties rather than technical ones which stand in the way of radical improve-ment at the present time. To produce something better would be easy but to produce it at the same price is impossible. It is a sad truth that whilst the British public is pre-pared to pay a great deal for its fish and chips, it is nowhere near as ready pay more for its newspapers.

Yours faithfully. C. D. NORTH-LEWIS, Director, Society of British Printing Ink Manufacturers,

Sardinia House, 52 Lincoln's Inn Fields, WC2.

rchitects and planners rom Professor Denes Hinton and reicesor Edgar A. Rose 🗀 🧸

ir, Your Planning reporter des-ioed (April 25) the joint seminar "ganized by the RIBA and the RTP Newcastle as "... an unusual isplay of public penirence by two rofessions not notably addicted to

There is a large number of archi-ects and planners about whom the ist part of this statement is certainly ot true. Anyone who has read or stened to official and semi-official tatements by these professions dur-ng the last decade would realize hat public self criticism bas been ne of their chief preoccupations. Whether or not the results have seen altogether beneficial may be pen to question. The origins of this oncern, nowever, ere entirely maiseworthy. A growing sense of orial responsibility, a desire to roaden the scope of the architecrure and planoiog, and to achieve greater competence have, doring this period, been the consistent and sincere objectives of the two institutes and the great majority of their members.

However, their efforts in this direction and the success that has atten-ded them have received less publicity than the small number of cases con-cerned with incompetence, lack of cerned with incompetence, lack of foresight or professional misconduct, and it is, therefore, doubly unfortunate that further publicity should be drawn by repeated public atatements to so-called crises, professional failures and the supposed responsibility of architects and planners for a wide range of social albuents. Such gestures, and particularly their reiteration in house journals and other publications, must often give the impublications, must often give the impression that the professions endorse the view that their ranks are filled by knayes and idious.

Like many others, architectura and planning are voluerable professions;

but they are also ones in which society is entitled to feel some con-fidence, and this can easily be eroded by constant self criticism. Moreover, such a one-sided commentary obscures the fact that throughout the country there are thousands of architects and planners, both in the public and private sectors, who, under great difficulties, are giving their clients and society a conscientions and competent service. They are probably doing more to show the public that their professions have a conscience that those who are cona conscience than those who are con-tinually proclaiming it in priot. # Genetics: Inbreeding and survival

As a result of their isolation and their adherence to a traditional system of intermarriage, the Kei Kummer Tuaregs, a tribe of the southern Sahara, have been able southern Sahara, have been able to provide evidence for an important principle of modern genetics: that inhreeding results in a reduction in the general "fitness" of a population. Fitness is measured in terms of the survival value of the individuals. It is virtually impossible to measure the effects of inhreeding on survival value in normal buman populations because they are extremely outbred as a result of strong cultural sanctions, which are almost universal among the races of man, against the matting of near relatives.

The disadvantage to the child of closely related parents is that he stands a greater chance of inheriting the same faulty gene from both parents. Such genes, known as recessive lethal genes, have httle or no effect if unly one of the pair is defective, but they are fatal if both are defective. When an individual inherits the same gene from both parents, he is said to be homotygous for that none. typous for that none.

The generally deleterious effects of inbreeding imply that homogygotes, even when they are not carrying a recessive lethal gene, are at some kind of disadvantage.

What Dr L. Degos and his colleagues in Paris wanted to find our was whether that disadvantage would show up in the proportion of homozygotes for one particular gene in the Tuareg tribe. The gene they looked at was the principal noe determining immunological tissue type. This is expressed on the white blood cells and it was possible to investigate it by taking blood samples.

From the blood samples they were able to estimate the proporbeterozygotes.

From the blood samples they were able to estimate the proportion of homozygotes for tissue type. Data then had to be compared with a measure of the number of bomozygotes that would be expected from the degree of inhreeding of the small population. In ordinary human populations, the inbreeding coefficient is so small that in a highly variable system, such as the tissue-type system, homozygosity is so rare that calculations would be meaning-less.

But the Kei Kummet Tuarega bave a traditional system of first-cousin internarriage which dic-tates that a man must marry his mother's brother's daughter. Dr mother's prother's gaugeter. Dr. Degos and his collectagues collected the genealogies, which have been compiled over the past three centuries, and calculated the expected inbreeding coefficient for the 300 existing members of the tribe. From that they were able to compute the proportion of homozy-gotes to heterizygotes they should find in the blood samples. They discovered that the actual They discovered that the actual proportion of homoxygotes was significantly below the theoretically predicted figure. The inference drawn by Dr Degos and his colleagues is that selective pressure to acting against homozygotes; that is acting against homozygotes; that they are in some way less fit than heterozygotes.

By complex genetic arguments.

By complex gene mechanism in man. That is, bowever, a somewhat controversial interpretation and cannot be properly evaluated on the bads of the existing data. But in view of earlier failures m find any evidence for selective pressure against homizygotes for the fissue-type genes
the evidence from the Tuereg tribeis likely to stimulate further investigation on the question.

The Bewitched Aldwych :

Irving Wardle

In these days of instant playwriting, Perer Barnes is one of the few men who puts his boots on for the job. Art awards no "A's" for effort, but there is something impressive about a writer who is driven to assemble a mountain of research material for the purpose of blowing it sky-high. Stylistically, The Bewirched is one of the most ambitious plays ever mounted by the RSC: in content, though, it strikes me as no more than an elaborate variation on Mr Barnes's last full-length play, The Ruling Class.

Six years ago in that gigantic farce be delivered an assault on social privilege through the case of a nobleman who let the side down. The Bewitched projects the same fable on the grandest possible scale, through the case of Carlos II, the last of the Spanish Hapshurgs, an impotent, in-continent, epileptic victim of royal inbreeding who (as the RSC's magazine Flourish puts it) "inherited madness from twenty-three of his ancestors, and in whom the notorious Hapsburg jaw was so pronounced that he could not chew".

What image could more dramatically express the lunacy of inherited power than that of a rigid social bierarchy depending for its survival on a slaver-city for swinging between farce bis dwarf (George Claydon), or ing, cretinous monarch? The and borror. Those qualities are discussing the weather with a problem is that of extending the present in this piece too; but prisoner on the rack. Alan image into a narrative and Mr Barnes's solution is to build his plot around the 30-year crisis of the Spanish succession.

While Carlos pitifully labours to produce an heir, the Court splits up into factions under his wife and mother pressing the rival claims of Austria and the Bourbons. Then the question of impotence is taken up by the Inquisition who stage an auto-da-fe to restore the King's virility, and launch a witch bunt to remove the curse from the

So much for the straight events. What passes on the stage swings dizzily between vaudeville, Jacobean tragedy, bot gos-pel sessions, and the Roman Catholic mass. Visually, the show is the most sumptuous example to date of the baroque directordesigner partnership of Terry Hands and Farrah, For the autodafe, the king and queen are trundled out at the summit of giant effigies in brilliant court dress; and at its climax a vast golden phallus slides out and links them in ceremonial con-gress. The towering four-poster, the two iron skeletons that supervise the action, even the streamers of filthy washing that descend like sails in the palace wash-bouse, are all on the same grotesquely magnified scale.

The word "Jacobean" bas been much applied to Mr Barnes's past work: in the sense of energy, readiness to pursue the biggest themes, and a capaof an otherwise stop-go new sonata (Op 7) by K. Meyer (no biographical information suprexture and a more arresting tonal palette. But even when well within his depth, as in the slow movements of Beethoven's "Pathétique" and Stravinsky's Sonata (1924), there was too little natural flow and shape in his unfolding of a melody. The two middle movements of Chopin's B minor sonata brought the best out of him. For the schetzo he found feather-

the scherzo he found feather-weight agility, and for the Largo, even though taken rather too fast, genuine warmth.

There was no mistaking the hoisterous elegance and sensuous yielding in the F major Waltz, the fignity of passion and gentleness in the D flat Noc-turne, the marvellous diversity of weight and emphasis in the F major Study and, supremely articulate, the G flat Impromptu. These were quintessential Rubinstein and the soul of Chopin; there was also, among the encores, an inimitable reading of Mendelssonn's "Bee's Wodding" with a delicious hesitation at the tune's reprises.

There were controversial interpretations — the brusque, almost inarticulate start of the C sharp minor Scherzo, the wayward treatment of the C maint Prelude (too short to justify the tion, this character remaios quite | point intended) : they reminded unbelievable. It was exciting to bear Beet-loven's early C major sonata played with such elemental strength and drive at the start of the programme, and the bravura of Rachmaninov's B flat minor sonata so effortlessly dispatched at the end. Mr Schmidt also covered the ground in Debussy's first book of Images with remarkable dex terity. None the less there were interest this French music as times in this French music, as also in miniatures by Chopin, Liszt and Rachmaninov when he scemed unaware that it is some-times better to be discreet. His danger lies in pushing contrasts to extremes, and in exceeding the limits of tonal beauty in fortissimo. But how sensitively and poetically he can play when be listens was very apparent in the Lento of Rachmaninov's

As British playwrights get praised for substituting work routines for plot, America deserves equivalent credit for pulling off the same trick with alcohol. As a genre, though, booze drama has settled down into one of the most rigid formulas ever to stunt theatrical imagination.

In Act One the party assembles and glasses ara clinked in a mood of warm friendship; then, as tongues loosen, the mask begins to crack. Hostilities flare, skeletons rattle, but before things get too ugly we reach a maudin platean where everyone starts owning up to a sense of failure. owning up to a sense of failure. Then the bar closes and they all go home. Plays of this kind (The Boys in the Band was the last to reach the West End) serve as a kind of Broadway confessional. Drink gets the conflict and revelations out of people without the sweat of thinking up a story. It also ensures that the action takes place in parenthesis action takes place in parenthesis and will bave no bearing on the characters' future lives.

My comrades agreed, and we did not release Powers. As it turned out, we'd done the right thing. Kennedy won the election by a majority of only two bundred thousand or so votes (actually 18,550), a negligible margin if you consider the margin if you consider the huge population of the United States. The slightest nudge either way would bave heen

So Eisenhower left the White House and Kennedy became President. I must say I bad no cause for regret once Kennedy became President. It quickly became clear he undarstood better than Eisenhower that an improvement in relations was the only rational course. Eiseohower had fully appreciated the danger of the Cold War leading to a hot war; he'd told me more than once, "I'm afraid of war, Mr Khrushchev".

Kennedy feared war too. He never told me in so many words, but be seemed determined to do something, to take concrete steps. He knew that war brings impoverisbmant to a country and disaster to a people, and that a war with the Soviet Union wouldn't be a stroll in the woods—it would be a borrible, bloody war. For the first time the United States would have to first a first time the United States would bave to fight on its own territory rather than seed its soldiers ovar to fight in Europe. In a war fought with nuclear missiles, the American monopolists, who had profited from wars in the past, would see the economic might of the United States destroyed. Ken-nedy understood all this year United States destroyed. Kennedy understood all this very well and wasn't afraid to call things hy their own names. Therefore from the beginning, be tried to establish closer contacts with the Soviet Union with an eye to reaching an agreement oo disarmament and to avoiding any accidents which might set off a military conflict.

Eisenhower, he was his own boss in foreign policy. He hired bright, young, well-educated ad-visers who were equally flexi-ble. Therefore Kennedy was of the Soviet Union. As President wanted us to agree to a guarantee to that effect. This was absolutely unacceptable. I tried to make him see that his was a reactionary position. "Mr President would like to president would like to make him see that his was a reactionary position." Mr the Soviet Union. As I've already mantioned, the bourgeois press likes in play in personalities, so American newspapers would always cast it in terms of Kennedy wanting to meet with me personally, with Mr Khrushchev, the head

We too, wanted to establish contacts with Kennedy because we shared his fear of war. I certainly was afraid of war. Who but a fool isn't? I've gor no qualms about coming right. no qualms about coming right out and saying we were afraid of war. That doesn't mean I think we should pay any price to avoid war. Certainly we shouldn't back down at the expense of our self-respect, our authority, and our prestige in the world. On many occasions while I was head of the Government we were confronted with the jealousy and aggressiveness of others toward our position, and we had to counter-attack of others toward our position, and we had to counter-attack these forces. By counter-attacking when we did, we won a number of significant moral victories. But these were victories in the Cold War. We managed to avoid a hot war.

Kennedy seemed committed to the same goal. [During our talks in Vienna.] Kennedy recognized the need to avoid military conflict. He felt we should

tary conflict. He felt we should sign a formal agreement to the effect that we would adhere to the principles of peaceful coex-istence. But what he meant by peaceful coexistence was freez-ing existing conditions in all countries in so far as their social and political systems were coo-cerned. Well, this concept was completely unacceptable to me, and I told him so.

Mr President, we too, would "Mr President, we too, would like to come to an agreement with you on the priociples of peaceful -coexistence, but for us, that means agreeing not to use force in solving disputes and not to interfere in the interoal affairs of other countries—it does not mean freezing the conditions which prevail in the conditions which prevail in those countries today. The question of a country's sociopol-irical system should be decided by that country itself. Some countries are still determining what sort of system is best for them, and we have no husiness freezing them into one form or another."

"I don't seree", be replied.
"We must freeze their systems.
Otherwise all sorts of undercover agents can undermine a country's government."
Kennedy wanted to maintain the status quo in the world. In other words, he wented countries with capitalist systems to President, your proposal smells of the olden days. Let's make a brief excursion into history.

There was a time when the United States was a British colony. You had your revolt, achieved victory, and bacame an independent state. You decided on your political system by yourselves. Now take us for example: we too, rose up in revolution and chose the system noder which we now live. According to your proposal, other countries would have bad a right to interfere and prop up British rula in the American colonies and tsarism in Russia. In fact, England and France-not to mention some other

not to mention some other countries—did wage a war of intervention against the young Soviet state, and you know your history well enough to remember how that ended.

"You see, Mr Prasident, we can't agree with you on freezing the status quo hecause that would mean depriving people of opportunities to decide their destinies for themselves. We stand for socialism, and you stand for capitalism. Let the other people of the world decide for themselves under what social and political system they will live."

they will live ". Had John Kennedy realized the implications of the proposal be was making, I don't think he be was making, I don't think he would have suggested freezing internal political systems. He was a highly intelligent President, but here he was defanding his class and defending capitalist tradition—and he wanted us to he party to such a thing! Frankly, I was somewhat surprised at him. Therefore I couldn't help using a little irony to mock what he was suggesting. I think even today the Americans still haven't given up the point of view Kennedy set forth to me.

My belief is confirmed by the war which tha United States had been waging in Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia. Such an offer, which values the stock market, where Bar-ters' shares were trading at around 82p immediately before the announcement, compared with a price of only 68p a week

Orice the bid was announced by the big tee and foods group yesterday. Baxters' price jumped a further 42p to 124p.
Terms of the offer are 17 Brooke Bond shares for every five of Baxters. Brooke Bond already holds 9.6 per cent of Baxters' equity and the Baxters' board, who hold an estimated 44 per cent recommend offer 4f per cent, recommend other shareholders to accept.

At present Brooke Bond has no meat retailing outlets, although it has extensive ranching and meat processing opera-tions. The acquisition of Baxters represents an important step for Brooke Bond which is itself capitalized at about £52m. Earlier this year Brooke Bond reformed its voting structure, giving equal rights to holders of the A and B shares, a move that was generally taken to prepare the way for an equity bid.

Yesterday's offer is conditional on there being un reference to the Monopolies Commission.

Mr Leonard Boyle, the chairman of the Building Societies Association, pointed out in his address to the association's general meeting yesterday thet:
"In 1973 building societies felt the full impact of government monetary policy as set out in Competition and Credit Control combined with a period of very high and voletile interest rates."

He edded that lending of £3,447m was "e very creditable achievement" in a year when net receipts fluctuated considerably and that it indicated thet societies use "their own inbuilt stabilization fund " to even ont the ebbs and flows.

Of the 545,000 loans granted, 142,000 were on new homes. More than 30 per cent of the homes on which loans were made cost less than £7,000, and furthermore 45 per cent of all new borrowers were earning less than £2,500 a year.

Mr Boyle spoke of the urgency for a policy decision on private sector honsing. "The policy of the Government as regards housebuilding in the private sector is not yet clear ". he said.

" More houses are certainly needed—and needed quickly. If progress is not made in this direction then that price of houses is bound to be affected by scarcity value."

Growth in bank lending to industry remains sluggish

By Ian Morison Financial Correspondent Banking figures for the four weeks to April 17 confirm that there has been no significant increase yet in industry's de-mands for funds since the end of short-time working, and suggest that the considerable de-celeration in the money supply evident in previous figures this ear has been maintained. Sterling lending by the London clearing bank groups to United Kingdom residents rose by £59m to £13,997m, with a rise in loans to manufacturing industry and agriculture partly offset by a reduction in borrowings elsewhere.

Despite a rise of £408m in sterling deposits by United Kingdom residents, the banks "eligible liabilities" fell by £197m: this reflected a sharp increase in their loans to other banks, which can be offset against their gross deposits in assessing these liabilities. Despite the return of further special deposits, the clearers reservé ratio fell from 13.8 to 13.3 per cent : for the banking sector as a whole, however, the ratio remained 13.8 per cent. The slight fall in total eligible liabilities suggests that the money supply figures for mid-April, due shortly, should show no more than a small increase. April statements, page 26

Pensions decision causes angry turmoil

The occupational pensions industry remained in angry turmoil yesterday following Tuesday's decision by Mrs Barbara Castle, Secretary of State for Health and Social Security, to scrap the State Reserve Scheme, due to come into operation next April, and the recognition tests for occupational pension schemes seeking exemption from it.

The Life Offices Association said it was dismayed that Mrs Castle was once agein making pensions a "political football". However, it welcomed "the evidence that she was not proposing to abandon the partnership between the state and occupa-tional schemes, which was a main feature of the plans of the two preceding governments."

Mrs Castle's stand has sur-prised the occupational peosions industry. Earlier feers that the Government would put pensions legislation back into the melting pot were allayed in the Queen's Speech, when it appeared that Mrs Castle would be prepared

of certain, unspecified features
she considered essential.

nearly two years of work on pension planning. This is the second time the industry has suddenly been forced to change its plans at the last minute. Mr Richard Crossman's proposals for occupational pensions met a similar fate when the Conservarives were unexpectedly re-turned to power in 1970.

The situation now is that Mrs Castle is pushing ahead with a White Paper to detail the Government's own long-term peounlikely that the provisions will be nut into operation for at least two to three years.

To the relief of the industry, however, it is clear that there will be a place for occupational pension schemes in the new arrangements. Existing peosion schemes which have been modified to meet the needs of the Sociel Security Act will presumably continue on those lines for the time being. Bot e questioo mark now hengs over the implementation of the many new schemes which heve been or are in the protess of being prepared to meet the legislation. It was unlikely that all the schemes would be ready by the deadline of April 5, 1975-and in view of the changed situation, it seems likely that many companies will defer making pension-scheme decisions until more of Mrs Castle's plans are koown. As a result, many em-ployees will continue to be without pension protection for another two or three years.

lo the City, there is a slightly ambivalent attitude to the scrapping of the State Reserve Scheme. It had been expected that the 5500m of funds it would bave had at its disposal would have heed a fillip to the market. On the other hand, the City was equally aware of the possible dangers of the Government, albeit at a distance, be-coming such an important investor in the stock market. Another delay for pensions plan, and Financial Editor page 31

Countering inflation—the Unilever contribution

Substantial benefits from ability to meet changing conditions

"... gives us confidence that we shall be able to deal with the problems of today's raging inflation" ... Sir Ernest Woodroofe (Chairman)

The Annual General Meeting of Unilever Limited and Unilever N.V. were held yesterday in Loodon and Rotterdam. Sir Ernest Woodroofe presided at the meeting of Unilever Limi-ted and Mr. G. D. A. Klijnstra at the meeting of Unilever

Addressing the London meet-1g. Sir Ernest Woodroofe

In the Report and Accounts for 1973 that you adopted a sbort time ago, your Board, commenting on the prospects fer the near future, said: "Some increases to our costs should be offset by further im-prevements in efficiency and productivity, and by the skills we already possess in substituting scarce materials." I feel that you, the Shareholders, would appreciate learning more about what has already been done and the extent to which possess throughout the which peeple throughout the whole husiness io all countries are involved—and people a: all levels, from Board members te fevers, from Board members to factory operatives, from man-agement to truck drivers. What has been done baars witness to an artitude of mind which con-stantly seeks improvement, is sensitive to the significance of chaoge and quick te react to it.

Steep Rise in Costs
Part of our normal task is to improve our performance by learning to do things better and to deal with difficulities that result from changes in the ecenomic climate. But the recent pace of change bas surely put us on our mettle. Do the Board and tep manage. Never in peace time, have ment change the organisation te changes been so dramatic. At meet changing cenditions and to changes been so dramatic. At the peak this year, the average price of edible oils had trebled compared with 18 months earlier; rises have varied from soya oil which doubled in price, to palm eil which trebled, and cocoout oil which quadrupled. Raw materials fer the remaioder of our food businesses are up by something businesses are up by something like a half. Even the cest of raw materials for detergents, which bas been relatively stable for years, bas risen steeply. The cost of the petrochemical ingredient is now well nigh double what it was a year ago. These increases were far above the general level ef inflatien but, as yeu all know only tee well, the pace of ether aspects of inflation bas been accelerating—fer instance, in the main countries in which Unilever eperates, the general level of wages and salaries rose on average by 13 per cent in

There have been ether changes too. During the past three years, exchange rates bave finctuated in a way unprece-dented during the peried since the war. We had also, in 1973. mere supply difficulties than we bave had fer years. The beom cenditions in the latter months nf 1972 and early menths of 1973 produced sbertages of some raw materials and packaging late in 1973. The energy crisis has changed the pattern of relativity of costs. This is not limited to the costs of steam and power in our factories and of fuel for transport. The effects are more wide-reaching. Similar addi-tional costs affect the prices of the materials we huy, in varying degree. Mineral oil is the basis of many chemicals and plastics impertant te us. The change in the price of mil bas, for instauce, changed the relation between the cests of cardboard, plastics and glass for packaging.

Encouraging Reactions The reaction throughout the business te the kiod of rapid changes I have just described, bas been most encouraging. It has demonstrated once again the amazing ingenuity ef eur peeple in dealing with changing parterms of costs of resources hoth material and human; in developmaterial and duman, in develep-ing alternatives for materials in shert supply. It is tee early te judge the full effects of re-actions during these past few months, but we have thought it worthwhile te try te put a value on what has been dene during these past few years. We have attempted 10 assess the total worth to Unilever ef adapting urselvea to changing costs, of doing things in different ways or with different materials. It has to be something of a guess, but we reckon that the value ef changing our methods, the pattern of raw materials we use, and ef products we make, and ef impreving the management ef resources, was about £60 millien per year averaged ever the period of 1967 te '72. And we are centinuing the good work. This £60 million is the sum ef changes great and small-on the one hand, of restructuring a whole pattern ef production as we are doing in the United Kingdem by moving some manufacture of animal feeds from port te inland locations; on the other hand, ef the changes made by the salesman in his pattern of calls so as to make better use of his time. The application of statistics and technelogically advanced weighing systems is sav-ing materials. Mere and more of eur products are delivered direct to the retailer, by passing the depots. Money speat on advertising is used more effectively. People in offices, fac-teries and distribution are em-ployed to hetter advantage. This £60 million is a rangible tribute to the ceorributien made by all those who werk for your Cempany.

Society beoefits toe. It gets the goods it needs for a smaller expenditure of resources. Today. industry makes ao additional contribution in helping to cembat the ravages of inflation, reducing costs by rapidly accemmodating itself to the pace of change. Without such a contribunon, inflation would have gathered even greater momentum. For example, without that £60 million per year, averaged over 1967 to 72, our prices would bave been higher by about 10 per cent at the end of the five year

Progressive Attitude of Mind

ceeds in making its contribution to the extent that a progressive attitude of mind is shared by all those who work for it. This is an attitude that sees change as an opportunity, that searches constantly for hetter ways of deing things, that seeks to improvise in a crisis. It is the very antithesis ef complaceocy and ef passive resignation to being swept along by the tide of eveots. You might well ask, what inspires such a spirit throughout a company? Certainly not exhortation. Deeds, not werds, set the pattern of behaviour, and they must start at the top. Do the Board and tep managepromote greater efficiency? Do they promote peeple who have been resourceful and have successfully initiated change? Dees planning inclode improve-ment and saviogs? And do they monitor results against plans?

Planning to meet change, to increase efficiency, te make better use of resources, and to find new ones, are all part of this progressive attitude of mind. Objectives are set and standards established. Achievement can be measured against these. Then satisfaction comes frem a sense of achievement. For most ef us, recognition of the achievement is an essential element to that satisfaction. It is equally an essential element in festering

Please do not take this te mean that spentaneous ideas fer arly difficult cenditiens because savings and improvements are in any way a lesser achievement. Indeed, often to the contrary, and they must be recegnised as such. Management has to make a conscious effert te draw out the spark of spentaneity and it does not come easily. Everyone rcust feel enceuraged te try out his new ideas. If top management is receptive to new ideas, so, usually, are others. Planning does nothing to inhibit sportaneity. The attitude of positively seeking improvement planned basis should organisation must coorribute. This is why all must have the same attitude of mind to improvement and the same quick reaction to change. Much of the scope for improvement invelves balancing advantages and dis-advantages in parts of the busi-ness for which differen people arc responsible. Fer example, production, marketing and distribution people are all involved in assessing whether there is a net gain in altering the shape of packages and consequently sometimes the shape of the products to them to get the combined advantages of storage and transport on pallets and of lew cost packaging. And oet only people inside, but also people outside, the individual company can be invelved. For example, we have specialists in beadquarters whom our companies can consult. Their expertise ranges over a wide field. We bave Economics Departments, part of whose responsibility is to try to fore-cast change. Fer example, they give indications of what raw materials are likely to get scarce or more expensive, which chaoges might he temporary and which permanent. The wise man anticipates. He dees net wait. Of ceurse, the ferecasters will be wrong from time to time, but at least one can chaege the assumptions as soen as this becomes clear and the exercise ef forecasting is enly werthwhile if the forecasters are more often right than wreog. Our people were right early in 1973 whan they forecast a steep rise in energy prices, even though they did not foresee the crisis. We set up a study group at that tima and being to this extent in a state of preparedness, has already enabled us to save at the rate of £10m on our annual fuel bill. Wide range of expertise We have specialists in productien, in distribution and sales, in data precessing and effice methods, io advertising, in packagiog and in ether areas in which they can be helpful over

But this does net mean slavishly following where ethers have trod. Clearly it weuld be nonsense te take the view that there is only one best way of carrying eut any particular eperation. Unilever is tee diverse and geographically widespread fer that. The computer controlled fully automatic palet was the controlled fully automatic palet. let warehouse that is right for our large margarina factories in Eurepe is not right for our toiletry cempanies which sell a mera complex range of products and have different channels of distribution. For them a lesser degree ef automation gives minimum cost. Then again, that which is right fer ene country, is not necessarily right for ethers. The pattern of wage levels, of cost and availability of raw materials and services, of laws, of impert restrictions, and of other factors varies enormously. County te country variations

In the Western world, it pays to mechanise intensively. In less developed countries where wages are lower, our manage-ments design their factories less mechanisation and they use more labour. Judge-meet is based on the relative costs of machinery, pewer and labour. For example, the man/ hours per ten of washing pewder in India is 48 whilst in the Philippines it is 27 and in Germany 10. As wages rise relative to the other costs in the less developed countries, it will pay to Introduce gradually further measures of mechanisation. Another pattern which varies frem country to country is that ef cests and availability ef eils and fats. In this respect, eur Indian company faces particulimpert restrictions. Our Indian scientists have de-veloped processing techniques te upgrade a number ef indi-genous olls so that they can oow he used for good quality soap. A saving for the company and a contribution to the Indian ecenemy, but a set of circumstances unique to India. Rigid universal policies have no place in our thinking because we operate in many countries under widely varying conditions. On the other hand, we reap a rich reward from the widespread nature of our enterprise. Individual companies can draw on the latest developments in all fields ef endeavour throughout the whole business. They can either adopt them lock, stock and barrel or they can pick up elements of what has been done elsewhere and adapt these to their own needs. Moreover, they have access to the sterehouse of past developments The design of a fully or semiautoman's pallet warehouse would be ef little interest te a company in a developing coun try. On the other hand, well established methods of operating pallet trucks in a traditional warehouse in the most efficient way could be most valuable.

Good communications essential People are stimulated into action hy hearing er reading about the way others bave tackled problems, have succeeded, have used new methods or equipment. There must be gnod communications. I know of no chairman who is satisfied with the communications in his business. To get a proper balance between too much and too littla: te get essendal in-formation to those who can use and not clutter the desks of those who cannot : to make sure that confidential information is not so confidential that it sits in the locked filing cabinet of the managing director safe from all inquisitive eyes, even those of the junior manager whe could use it te the cempany's advantage: these are the conundrums. We dn eur best to solve them. We collect infermation from all parts of the world in the headquarters and circulate distilled versions. People are naturally keen that their achievements should be bruited round the world. If their ideas are adepted elsewbere that is the kind of sincere flattery they truly appreciate. Peeple visit one anether from headquarters to companies, from companies to be adquarters, and from combeadquarters, and from com-panies to companies. Specific subjects are discussed at seminars attended by managers ef many nationalities, for example; the work of the study group on Cost of Energy was followed by a seminar on the implication of the energy crisis for strategic planning. Another seminar concentrated on the reaction to social change, a aub-

ject which has an important bearing on effectiveness. Human relations are a facet of social change which has a double importance. Where there is a good understanding between people and groops of peeple, such a co-operative spirit usually goes hand in band with efficiency. Additionally, where there are misunderstanddoes efficiency suffer, but absenteeism, strikes and other disruptions are the order of the day. We stand by our record in this respect.

Improvement goes much wider than reducing man bours per ton er increasing sales lume per man. But such improvement is an impertant part and, in this respect, we heve dene our hit te fight inflation. Over the last three years, when the levels of wages and salaries have risen as never before, we bave been able te absorb ene third of the increase by greater efficiency in the use of manpower. Improvements have come in a large part from increased volume of sales without corresponding increases in manpower and, for the rest, by using fewer necession for the rest, by using fewer people fer the same volume of sales.

Redundancy problem in industry This raises the ugly word redundancy. We are fully conscious of the human problems involved, problems which are the same irrespective of the cause—be it improvements in roductivity, decline of an industry, er Government action.
Fortunately, we have not experienced mach redundancy because growth has taken care of a large part of the problem.

One aspect of the redundancy problem is the declining industry. Stemming decline eliminates er limits the problem of redundancy and at the same time is just as valuable a centribution te savings as other ways of improving the use of reseurces. You will have read in the supplement to this year's Report and Accounts our history in oilseed milling. fn Report the 50's, we had many mills scattered throughout Europe, most of them treating less than 100,000 tons/year of tropical oilseeds. The industry declined in the 60's. Quite a number of mills closed down because they were net viable. Their cests were high because they were small. Moreever, these trepical oilseeds were being processed in their countries of erigin in ever increasing quantities. Bet the decline in our business has been arrested and reversed by concentraring en processing soya heans on a buge scale. There is heans on a huge scale. There is me because, as you know, Mr a ready market for the high pro- David Orr succeeds me as Chairtein meal and the oil. Today, we have four plants in Europe, twe already of 1 million tons per annum capacity, ene shortly te be brought up to that capacity and another to 600,000 tons per annum. We bave authorised principle the building of a big plant in Switzerland and there is scope for further expansion. Tile economies of large scale eperation are erermous and the business is profitable. The recenstruction of the oilseed milling industry has not been achieved without a human problem of redundancy. This year, we shall be employing two-thirds the oumber of people we employed in that industry in 1968 to process two-and-a-balf times as much oilseed. Without adaptation to change, with the decline allewed to run its full course, no one would bave had

Cheaper costs The economies of large scale eperation are not limited to manpower. Practically all costs are cheaper and not just factory cests. For example, when we merged our frozen foods husiness in Germany with that of Nestle, we were able to make considerable savings in cold sterage and distribution expeoses and a substantial reduction to the level of working Improvement can ceme, not enly from large scale operations, hut also from attention to detail. It is just as important a part of the attitude to doing things better. We have pushed up the capacity of our detergent spray towers steadily ever the past 20 years. Yet developments over the past 3 years have enabled us to squeeze a further 20 per cent per hour out of them. We were recovering glycerine frem scap-making well before the rurn ef the century. But we have not given up trying te improve our methods. Even as recently as a few years ago, we had to evapokeing, as in the factories. For example, our impreved financial discipline in recent years stems from discussing our cash position with top management at a time when funds were declining. The reaction was universal. Bit by bit again with meticulous artention te detail, our compa-nies have used cash more effectively. As a result, working capital as a perceotage of sales has fallen steadily from 17.7 per cent in 1970 to 15.7 per cent in 1973. The attitude of mind I have been describing is the very essence of the rele of research. essence of the rele of research. The research scientist seeks te discover the new and improve the old. He seeks for cheaper processes, replacements for expensive ingredients, and improvements in the shelf life of products ro reduce distribution costs. From such quests have come the range of refining processes now at our command which give us amazing flexibility in the choice of oils for our margarines; the shifty to use vegetable protein te supplement expensive mest; the lower distripensive mest; the lower distri-bution costs for some of our dairy products whose shelf life has been extended by packing under sterile conditions.

But the research scientist is not a lonely Rumpelstiltskin de-manding, his fee to spin straw into gold. He demands to be part of the community. He must

Mr Cube, Knight of the Road.

You probably think of Tate & Lyle as simply the sugar people.

If that's the case, Mr Cube would like to change your mind.

Because Tate & Lyle's shipping, warehousing and distribution, bulk liquid storage, commodity trading, engineering and road transport actually account for more profit than the traditional sugar refining.

Of course, every one of these activities has been a natural development using the skills that come to Mr Cube from growing, buying, transporting, storing, refining and distributing his sugar.

He got into road transport, for example, because of the need to transport Tate & Lyle sugar about the country. He now transports a lot of other people's goods as well, and the various Tate & Lyle transport fleets include over 700 vehicles.

Mr Cube will, of course, continue on your sugar packets. But he firmly intends to carry on his drive to expand in other places, too.

Results 1973

- * Group Profits for 1973 after Depreciation but before Taxation were £6,703,234, an increase of 10.72% over the previous year. These profits are, once again, a record but, as anticipated at the time of the Interim Statement they were adversely affected by the general industrial and economic situation in the United Kingdom during the second half of the year.
- * The Directors recommend an increased Final Dividend of 11.54% making a total for 1973 of 16.44% equivalent to 24.22% gross (23.07% gross for 1972). This uplift is just within the 5% increase in gross dividends allowed under the Pay & Prices
- * Both at home and overseas the Group had a very successful year. Compared with 1972 additional rentals secured showed an increase of 37% and Sale Outright an increase of 12.5%.

- NOTES:
  1968 Figures: These include the Dictograph Group of Companies for the first time. The Turnover, Rental Revenue and Depreciation totals for these Companies are for the sixteen months to 31st December, 1968, but the Profits before Tax are for the post-acquisition period only.
- The Parent Company's share of the Profits of the Australian Associated Company were included in the Consolidated figures for the first time in 1969. As from 6th April. 1973, Tax on Dividends is imputed to Sharebolders and payable by the Company as an advance of
- Corporation Tax. The 1972 and 1973 Dividend rates are grossed up to provide a comparison with rates in earlier years. The Ordinary Dividend percentages and Earnings per share have been adjusted to take into account Capitalisation issues. *The Earnings per share have been affected by the change in basis of Company Taxation; the Gross Earnings per Share based on Group Profit before Taxation are: 1973—17.27p. 1972—15.60p.

Future Prospects

* Mr. E. H. Cooper, Chairman, states "In view of the present economic situation and the intention of the Chancellor of the Exchequer to introduce a further budget in the autumn, it would be injudicious to comment in any detail on your Company's prospects for 1974. However, your Company has the largest order book in its history and new rental business taken during the first four months of the year is considerably in excess of that secured at this stage during 1973. These factors, coupled with your Company's strong financial position, leave your Board quietly confident that your Company's record. of seventeen years consecutive increase in profitability will be continued during 1974."

Meeting 6th June, 1974.

High prices for crude oil are likely to continue until the 1980s when the strong position of the oil producers would start to be undermined, according to Professor Colin Robinson, Professor of Economics at the University of Surrey.

He said et the Institution of Electrical Engineers conference on Energy, Europe and the 1980s, that the industrialized countries would have to live with a group of suppliers who would expand ontput slowly and increase unionamerica's net income reached a record $7,050,000 an 8 percent gain over the $5,965,000 earned in 1972. Over the past ive years, Unionamerica's net income has grown at an average ompounded annual rate of 26 percent per year. Earnings per share equaled $1.32 in 1973, compared with 1.16 earned in 1972, an increase of 14 percent. Of the three operating groups of companies, the mortgage banking and real estate group accounted for 50 percent of Unionamerica's et income, while the insurance groups companies, the mortgage banking the increase of the process of the part of the part of the companies.

Results for the year 1973 were the best in Unionamerical's history

and real estate group accounted for 50 percent of Unionamerica's set income, while the insurance group contributed 47 percent. The contribution of the business services group, while small, showed a ignificant advance from 1972.

In March 1974, approximately 1.368,000 shares of the Company's sutstanding common stock were reparchased by Unionamerica for 39.00 per share as a result of its offer, amounced in February, to surchase 1,500,000 or more shares of its stock. The shares were repurchased with borrowed funds. Management presently does not have any specific plans to incuradditional debt.

Also, it is our intention to invest substantially all of our earnings on present business activities. One of the principal considerations in reating the 'new' Unionamerica on December 31, 1973 was that the nortgage banking and real estate group, the insurance group and he business services group all represent areas of substantial apportunities for growth. With a well-structured capital base, strong lational and international position, a broad spectrum of poportunity for growth and qualified management, Unionamerica and its groups expect to enjoy a promising future.

British agency in three-way link

Charles Barker & Sons, which s one of the largest agencies emaining in Britain without existing international ties, has linked with an American and a German company in a joint enture partnership.

An agreement was signed in London this week with N. W. Ayer, of the United States, and Werbeagentur Dr Hegemann GmbH, of Germany, to form a joint holding company based in Holland.

The new company, Ayer Barker Hegemann International, is equally owned by the three partners. It in turn will hold what are described as "substantial minority shareholdings" of approximately £250,000 in each of the three founder

While each of the partners will maintain complete autonomy in their home warkets. Hegemann there will be an exchange of through se senior executives so that each will be represented on the hoards of the other two.

The three agencies, through the holding company, will fund acquisitions in other countries. It is hoped, they say, to have acquired substantial interests in ageocies in France, Benelux, Italy, Switzerland, Scandinavia, Spain and Austria by the end of 1975.

Negotiations are already well advanced in some of these countries

With billings now totalling £20m, Charles Barker has been increasingly moving from its traditional area of financial advertising into the consumer field. It has attempted penetration of the European field through the half ownership of an agency in Frankfurt and via loose associations with agencies in other countries. The two other partners have also attempted other methods of international expansion. N. W. Ayer purchased a Brit-ish agency, Alexander Butter-field, in 1967 but found that its growth under new ownership was not as rapid as had been hoped. The agency was subsequently sold to Pembertons and later absorbed into the Kimpher complex, leaving Ayer once again without European repre-

Group sales and profit from trading again reached record levels. Sales at £54.070.584 were 24.5% higher than in 1972, while the net balance from trading rose by 18.9%. Pre-tax profit increased by 14.6% to £4,804,745.

The total dividend of 2.18p per share (against 2.14p net for 1972) is covered 2.8 times by attributable profits of £2,077,090. ☐ 55% of Group turnover and 61% of Group pre-tax profit were provided by the overseas companies. BBA friction materials are now being manufactured in 13 countries.

All UK factories began 1974 with 91 weeks of 3-day working (or the equivalent). Although Group sales rose by 7% in the first two months the Group has clearly had a flat first quarter as far as profit is concerned. Nevertheless, some profit was made in this country end profits in overseas companies were maintained. Fortunately, demand for our products remains buoyant and we expect in the remaining nine months to make good most, if not all, of the damage.

Important announcement from Barclays Bank

25% rebate of commission charges for business customers this half year

For the period January to June 1974. Barclays Bank will give a 25% across the board rebate on bank charges to all non-personal customers. The only exceptions will be charges negotiated on an inter bank basis.

The basis of assessment agreed with customers remains unchanged, but the effect will be that some 520,000 of our customers will be charged only 75% of the commission due at the end of June for servicing their accounts.

Mr. Deryk Weyer, Senior General Manager, said: "We feel it is now the turn of trading and industrial customers to benefit. They have had a difficult winter. Three day working has cut production and on top of that costs of energy and raw materials have increased. We believe it is right for us to give some help by temporary rebate in our commission charges.

For further details please ask your local Barclays Manager.

From Mr J. This is a problem which bas been exer-

High-level Government and industrial committees were set up to tackle the consequent effects on both the national economy and our daily national economy and our daily lives. ### Secretarial salaries in the universities

From Mr Harold Knowlson Sir, Mrs. Thompson's letter on secretarial salaries in universities (April 30) will have been read with considerable sympathy and agreement by many members of academic, administrative and secretarial staffs of universities.

Io a quarter of a century's service as a member of the academic staff of a university, I bave spent a wholly disproporbave spent a wholly dispropor-tiocate amount of time either io undertaking work an effi-cient secretary could have done better, or in writing imumera-hle letters and memoranda asking for more adequate and better paid secretarial staff to be appointed.

Twenty-five years ago, universities had the notion that almost all their work could be done by lectures, from manus-cript notes, being given to stu-dents. What need was there for a well-paid secretarial staff?

But in some operations, such as those in which I have been involved—the in service train-ing of teachers—there is great need for skilled administrative and secretarial help. Times have changed and conditions ere much hetter than they were. Bristol is not the only university in which sector secretaries can be promoted to executive assistant and other

I am informed that this Meeting is properly constituted and I will call upon the Secretary to read the Notice convening the oresume that it is your wish that the Report and Balance Sheet which have been circulated to you abould be taken as read, is You will remember that I told you last year that, on the occasion of the visit of Mansiaur Monick and mysalf to Ankara, the Turkish Government advised us of its wish to see the Ottoman Bank associated with Turkish interests to whom the majority of the local capital would be transferred. I also told you that thanks to our good relations with e Turkish banking group wa drew up e plan which seemed to us to meet the requirements of all interested parties. This plan, which for various reasons entailed somewhat langthy discussions, had just been submitted to the Turkish authorities at the time of our last General Meeting; we had reason then to think that Greenment enproval would be forthcoming as our clan was in line with their thinking. As you know, however, a General Election mak place in October 1973, but it was not until the beginning of 1974 that a Coalition Government was formad.

Without losing any time we contacted the new Government and our first interview at Ministerial level enabled us to establish that our representations were well understood. The Government wished, however, for time to reflect on the matter before taking in soite of the fresh delay which has occurred, the fect that natice has not been given enables us to continua working normally under the regime of our Convention, whilst at the same time, of course, oursuing our efforts to find a satisfactory solution for the luture.

HOTEL PROJECT-ISTANBUL INTERCONTINENTAL The hotel construction in Istanbul to which I referred at the last Annual General Maeting continues satisfactorily and it is hoped that the Hotel will be opan for business in May or June 1975.

BANQUE GRINOLAY OTTOMANE

The Paris Branch of Banqua Grindlay Ottomana has been completely modernized thus facilitating the devalopment and diversification of that Bank's affairs in Paris. The business of the other Branches continues to expand satisfactorily and during the year an office was successfully established in Monte Carlo. The close association maintained with National and Grindleys Group assists to a marked extent the expansion of the overseas business of Banque Grindlay Ottomane.

The Turkish economy expended satisfactorily during 1973. The gross national product reached 6.4%, or nearly the 7.5% forecast in the Plan. The slight shortfall stams from a drop in agricultural production. On the other hand, progress was achieved in the fields of industry, building, commerce and communications.

The 1973 wheat crop is estimated at 9 million tons as compared with 11 million tons in the preceding year; other crops were (1972 figures in brackets) : tobacco 164,000 tons (173,000):

cotton 520,000 tons (544,000): sugar beet 5,400,000 tons

The fruit crop (nuts, figs, reisins) showed a smell increase at 422,000 tons against 355,000 tons; nives, however, yieldad only 487,000 tons compared with 1,019,000 tons in 1972. The industrial sector plays a constantly increasing rola in the economy and this progress has continued:

petroleum products: increased from 10,718,000 tons in 1972 to 11.S22,000 tons in 1973; 2,272,000 tons against 1,977,000 tons steal production: in 1972: cement: 9,400,000 tons against 8,425,000 tons paper: 354,000 tons against 308,000 tons in 7S5,000 tons against 746,000 tons in sugar: 1972.

The output of electricity further progressed to kWh 12,200,000,000 against kWh 11,200,000,000. important increases were again shown in all headings making up the balance of paymants. (Foreign exchange reserves showed a favourable position of the equivalent of approximately $2,000,000,000 at the and of 1973): exports reached $1.318,000,000; imports exceeded $2,000,000,000:

Turkish workers abroad repatriated $1.183,000,000 against $732,000,000 ln 1972. Tourism has continued to develop satisfactorily. Several tourist centres (haliday villages, horels, etc.) are in course of construction. In Istanbul construction of two large hotels

(Sheraton and Istanbul Intercontinental) is in course, as is that of a third somewhat smaller hotel. The opening in October 1973 of the suspersion bridge, the longest of its type in Europe (3,500 feet), over the Bosphorus has already been reported in the press. The bridge will bring very considerable benefits to the communications system and the economy of Turkey. LEBANON

Monsieur Philippe Dupéron, the Chairman of the Société Nouvelle de la Banque de Syrie et du Liban since its formation in April 1963, resigned in May 1973. His wide experience and wise counsel will be much missed, but he hae accepted the position of Président d'Honneur, thus ensuring that his advice will be readily available to the Bank. He was succeeded as Chairman by Monsleur Guy Trencert a senior executive of the Banqua da Paris et des Pays-Bas, Paris.

The affairs of the Bank expanded satisfactorily in 1973 as e result of the increased business available in the Lebenon in conditions of relative political stability despits the outbreak of hostilities in October 1973.

The continued appreciation of the Lebanese £ in terms of Western currencies, particularly the US $. has caused certain difficulties in the Lebanese banking industry,

PROFIT AND LOSS ACCOUNT.

The Profit and Loss Account shows that the profit for the £993,000 was almost £100,000 higher than the comp figure for 1972; after deducting profits awaiting transfi including the balance of £40,328 brought forward from there remains an emount of £870,380. Again this year, your Committee have considered it prude place £100,000 to reserve.

From the Balance available your Committee recommen a dividend of £1.40 per shere be paid, which will re £700,000. In conformity with Article 40 of the Statutes. ments will also be made to holders of Founders Share £115.74 per whole stare, requiring £25,000 and a samount to Members of Committee, leaving £20,380 carried forward to next year.

Eagle Star

Importance of life profits

The Eagle Star prognostications for 1974 may make slightly more encouraging reading than those from General Accident earlier this week, but that should probably be little surprise. Against GA's considerable vulnerability in earnings terms to a dip in underwriting profits this year, Eagle Star's defensive merits in the form of its larger than average commitment to life business starts to come into its

Not that Eagle Star is without recovery prospects in its general underwriting business—Australia and Canada for instance—but the key et this stage is that the group at least feels confident of group at least reets connident or a further increase in share-holders' life profits—now on an annual valuation business for transfers—which last year accounted for around a quarter of the pre-tax total. Not that the rate of increase will necessarily be as large as last year now that interest rates bave probably reached a plateau, but withom profit policies (which have given considerable imperus to profit growth over the last year or so) apparently remain a good proportion of new business written

Throw in investment income and one has Eagle Star compar-ing very favourably with the other composites, selling at under 5 times pre-tax investment income and long term profits. But with no outstanding attraction in yield terms—64 per cent with the shares at 99p—the more relevant short-term—question would seem to be whether or not the Monopolies Commission gives the go shead for the Grove-wood and Smaley deals—and the terms: Eagle Star sets our for acquisitions that are now likely to cost around £45m against Eagle Star's own market capita-lization of £92.5m.

The rate at which Tozer Kemsley & Millburn's profits growth slowed down last year—from 48 per cent in the first half to under 10 in the second—was a little sharper than expected and the sharper than expected and the sharper fell in to 42p yesterday. Du Pont's now wholly-owned BMW sales have been virtually stagmant since November and it is doubtful whether Vistby even managed to match its 1972 earnings last year, despite getting off to a good start. With the situation apparently exacerbated by spares problems, a substantial setback must be on the cards this time.

> On the other hand, there may be more mileage in Price & Pierce than the market bas allowed for hefore its markets peak. It presumably accounted for the lion's share of the profits growth last year, given its poor record in 1972, and with woodpulp in particular still a seller's market it would probably need a particularly sharp deterioration in timber to prevent some fur-ther growth this year. IKM's traditional business—financing the movement of good—is of course vulorrable both to any deceleration in world trade and to high money world trade and to high money costs. But neither is as serious a problem for TKM: as is sometimes assumed, given the greater usage made of its financing facilities in depressed times and its ability to pass a high proportion of its own financing costs straight on to the customer. The new merchant banking operation has made a better-thanexpected maiden contribution to profits while the sale of its lease on its former premises has lease on its former premises has, together with other disposals, added an exceptional £1.1m to

Since the year-end, the Candia disposal has given cash flow a further boost and TKM's balance sheet should look healthy enough. While the shares are unlikely to do much until tha BMW position improves, they look capable of weathering 1974 well anough.

Plantation Holdings Commodities

conundrum

Prices of rubber and palm oil have come right off the top, and Plantation Holdings' share price has fallen accordingly. But the parallel should not he overdone.
While the importance of commodity prices is clear enough in a rise from £571,000 to £1.5m in Malaysian profits, the defensive argument in the teeth of falling prices remains strong.

Spot rubber prices, after all, are still 50 per cent higher than at this time last year with some firm underpinning from the fast rising cost of synthetic rubber. On the palm oil side, last year's rising level of production has been in sight. And it was bound to be the engineers, whose the rising level of production has been the most still not worked ont. And much of last year's crop was sold forward, at relatively low prices enyway. Overall, PH is going for a further profit increase from Malaysia this year, barring a catastrophic drop in prices.

The United Kingdom operations, meanwhile, should reap the benefit from the opening of three new factories in Scotland
-start-up costs having dragged profits back last year and whatever adverse effects resulted from three-day working should, at present rates, have been fully pulled back by the interim:

So there is every chance of PH seeing all-round growth again this year and that is a rare enough prospect these days to offer good support for a p/e ratio of 10.2 and a yield of S per cent with the shares at 44p.

A propaganda victory for union militancy

Paul Routledge explains the engineers' strike action as possible, Mr Foot could not

The first all-ont engineering strike of unlimited duration strike of unlimited duration that turned into a one-day wonder after a mystery donor stumped up £65,000 must rank as the oddest case in the annals of the National Industrial Relations Court, even in the chequered history of that short-lived body.

Apart from the newspaper and motor manufacturing industries, traditionally the first to suffer from such strike action, the stoppage bad scarcely begun before it was called off. There is no reliable estimate of the number of engineering workers who responded to the militant call of their divided leadership.

But though the strike may bave had negligible industrial impact, the psychological and political significance should not be lightly dismissed. Mr Hugh Scanlon president of the Amal-gamated Union of Engineering Workers who used his casting vote to authorize the stoppage, was at pains yesterday afternoon not to crow over his successful defiance of the Industrial Court.

But the whole episode will go down in shopfloor folklore as a victory for the philosophy of direct action which is at the beart of the policies pursued by the increasingly dominant Left wing in the AUEW. If sufficient industrial wavele is used the industrial muscle is used, the argument will run, then the Establishment has no option but to give in while clinging to as much face as possible. Ever since the 1971 Industrial Relations Act came into force, and with it all the apparatus of the court and its associated bodies, the prospect of a final trial of strength between organized labour and the law bas been in sight, And it was bound to be the engineers, whose hostility has been the most implacable, who were cast in the role of the antagonist.

The writing was on the wall with the case of Mr James Goad. the Suffolk lay preacher whose futile efforts to remain a mem-ber of the AUEW cost the union E61,000 in fines and costs in 1972 for contempt of the court order to admit him to meetings. When Mr Robert Dilley, the "none of this trade union nonsense " chairman of the Woking firm of Con-Mech Engineering, took the union to court for stag-ing a recognition strike at his factory, it was clear that all was ready for a showdown.

A fine of £75,000 for contempt of the order to end the strike, promptly followed by a one-day stoppage in the entire industry, was only a curtain-raiser to the beavyweight contest over the issue of compeosation to Mr Dilley. Though the new Labour Government promised to get rid Dilley. the scene was this set to the critical vote oo Tuesday, during the regular weekly session of the AUEW engineering section executive meeting at the union's offices in Peckham. The political profile of the seven-man execurive is finely balanced but generally breaks four-three in favour

On that day one of the leading militants, Mr Bob Wright, was on holiday in Yugoslavia. A three-three tie was expected and Mr Scanlon predictably used his casting vote for an all-out Stoppage. Mr John Boyd, the leading moderate on the executive, twice beaten by Mr Scanlon in elecpeaten by Mr Scarlon in elec-tions for the presidency, could scarcely contain his anger at the vote. Ranged with Mr Boyd, the tuha-playing Salvation Army membet who represents Scot-land, were Mr Bill John, the beavyweight Right-winger rep-presenting Melecand the conresenting Wales and the south-west who is standing for reelec-tion and is only 900 votes ahead of his Left-wing rival in the first ballot, and Mr Arthur Hearsey, from the north-west. Sir John may not consider that his authority is impaired by yesterday's novel deus ex machina, but that is not how it will be sold in the factories. The engineers have not lost a peony piece by calling an all-out strike, whereas they stood to lose £65,000 by accepting the advice of the Government to recognize e court in its last few weeks of

This propaganda victory is scarcely likely to be forgotted in the coming political battle between the Left and Right factions for the general secretaryship of the union. Mr Wright, the apostle of direct action, is standing against Mr Boyd, the moderate who will be painted by the militarts as the map who the militants as the man who ran away from the fight when the crunch came. It will be an interesting election, pregnant with importance for the whole Labour movement.

Another delay for pension plans

The insurance industry is still realing from Mrs Barbara Castle's decision to scrap the State Reserve Pension Scheme and the recognition tests for occupational peosion schemes which wished to be exempted

The industry is extremely disquieted by the new development—which has, at a stroke, undone much of the important work of the past two years in ensuring that everyone is en-titled to realistic pension

The Government's objections to the State Reserve Scheme can he encapsulated into its differential treatment for women—a sore point near to Mrs Castle's own heart—and the delayed buildan of realistic. delayed build-up of realistic pensions for all its members.

However, was Mrs Castle wise to wipe these arrangements out of existence without providing her own immediate substitute? Mrs Casile's own answer to this point is that the delay of two to three years before her two to three years before her own plans come into operation will be worth waiting for. This gives several bints as to the likely shape of the future state pension arrangements; unfortu-nately it is of no belp at all 10 the private peosions sector in determining what it should be doing in the interveniog years.

Obviously some form of para-nership hetween state and private peosioo plans is eo-visaged, but in the absence of the all-important terms, the industry is hamstrung. The political philosophy of this Government means that most combinations of options most combinations of options are currently open. What the industry needs to know quickly is whether or not it will be possible for private pension plans to contract out of the state scheme, and, secondly, will it be able to afford to contract. tract out?

On the face of it, the most likely course of action would be for Mrs Castle to resuscitate the Crossman scheme, if only because this is the only way the Labour Government could real-istically hope to bring its new pensions arrangements into being within the stated two to three years.

Starting from scratch all over again would require a five-year programme. On the other band, the proposed Crossman legislation only needs taking down from the shelves, dusting and refining.

The Crossman plan was for earnings-related benefits to be financed out of earnings-related contributions. It was a pay-as-you-go type of scheme which relied for its success on the continued willingness of future generations to pay out at ever-increasing levels for the preceding generations of pensioners. It would have taken, however, 20 years of cootributions to provide the new full earnings-related benefits—which is where the Castle plan is likely to diverge from it.

The question then becomes: how much will this cost and how will it be financed? Mrs Castle has already stated that the con-tributions of employers to the hasic state flat rate scheme will be increased to 8.75 per cent. The employees pay 5.5 per cent and the Exchequer another 18 per cent.

This will provide by July, basic flat rate pensions of £10 and £16 a week for single persoos and married couples. Had the State Reserve Scheme come into operation it would have been financed by contributions of 1.5 per cent from em-ployees and 2.5 per cent from employers. As a fully-funded (ie, invested) scheme taking over 20 years to mature, there would have been no need for subvention payments or io-

Now this is all back in the melting pot. Whether Mrs Castle follows the Crossman proposals for earnings-related benefits or goes for a more egalitarian realistic flat rate pension for all, the increased cost can only be met through increased taxation and considerably bigher comributions from the employer. At the moment, employers with an occupational pension scheme are paying around 7.5 per cent of their payroll towards it. The Crossman scheme per-mined some form of contracting out which made it just economically feasible for the employer 10 sboulder the costs of the earnings-related state scheme (with reduced benefits) as well as provide an occupational scheme. Unless similar provisions for contracting out are built into the Castle plan—and this is by no means a foregone conclusioo—

the cost of providing occupa-tional pension schemes for topping-up purposes only could well be prohibitive. However, there bus been a dramatic shift in pension awareness, thanks to the Social and trade unions.

It is unlikely that having had the first taste of the occupational pensions scheme cherry, they will be prepared to settle for reduced occupational henefits. And certainly about two-thirds of the country's 100,000 or more pension schemes which bave been amended or introduced to meet the Social Security Act's requirements will be implemented in their new form. For the rest, unfortunately, it will be back to the drawing board and one must assume that without compulsion many smaller companies will opt out of this responsibility for their Margaret Stone

How Unilever saved £60m a year on costs and held prices down

By Our Financial Staff Unilever was not badly affected by the winter power restrictions and is "on target" restrictions and is "on target for budgeted first-quarter results, due next Wednesday. This was stated yesterday by Mr David Orr, the new chairman of Unilever Limited (United Kingdom arm of the Anglo-Dotch group) after the annual meeting in London. He gave in indication of what the results would be.

In produce a year of standstill as far as profits are concerned in a year of inflation is a serious disappointment not only to shareholders but to everyone in the business; for it is vital fur all who are concerned with this Company, employees and shareholders affice, that we should continue to produce increased profits.

A company can never stand still and we must continue in iovest in the future since expansion and modernisation are the only ways of keeping the Groop healthy and costs under control.

But it is one year in a history of over 180 and I have no doubt at all that with the skill and spirit we possess there are many good ones in store for us.

As a group we are very conscious of our responsibilities in the field of Industrial safaty and I am pleased to say that our subsidiery, Mildland Assurance, has this year bean awarded The Sir George Earla Trophy, the premier eward for industrial safety of the Royal Society for the Prevention of Accidents.

After a number of difficult years a profit was made in motor Insurence. A small increase in private motor insurance rates (6 per cent. in respect of comprehensive cover) was authorised by the Department of Trede and Industry during 1973 to cover the cost of VAT and a further small increase was allowed at the end of the year in respect of young drivers where claims experience had been significantly in excess of that allowed for in the premiums. Whilst the mild weather at the start of 1974 coupled with the reduction in private motoring and more stringent speed limits might lead us to anticipate a favourable result this year, the affact of ever increasing costs is already being felt in respect of both claims and expenses and a further increase in premiums is necessary if losses are not to re-emerge.

Overseas risks written in the London merket have produced a profit from the 1989 account closed in 1973. The funds of the remeining open years appear more then edequate. Despita difficult conditions world-wide, together with market over-capacity, we are meintaining a leading position without resort to unacceptable rete reductions. Our inwards treaty account produced e profit from the closed 1972 eccount.

MARINE, AVIATION AND TRANSPORT

Out of the surplue on our 1970 underwriting account £0.5m has been transferred to profit and loss eccount. Tha underwriting eccounts for 1971 end 1972 are developing satisfactorily but it is too early to predict the outcome of the 1973 account. Our closing fund hes increased from 136 per cent, to 151 per cent. of the year's premiums, indicating a strong reserve position. Wa shall, however, need this strength to meet the pressures arising from very competitive and frequently unraelistic rating levals as well as the heavier liabilities that inflation and changes in rates of exchange of currencies produce.

Eegla Star has always meinteined reserves et en above average lavel in relation to its premium income. We have been able to increase the total of our capital and free reserves over the past ten years by 60 per cent. Without calling on our sharaholders but this increase has been excaeded by that of our premium income which has more than quadrupled. Whilst our position le stilf comperatively very strong we elm for e continuation of our substantief premium income growth and would in coneequance wish to take edvantage of any suitable opportunity to increase our reserve strength. In 1973 the opportunity erose to ecquire the ordinary aheres not already owned by the company in Bernard Sunley Investment Trust Limited end In Grovewood Securiues Limited on what at that time wa considered were favourable terms. These purchasaa would have increased our capital end reserves Immediately by £21m with the possibility of a lurthar increase of £27m in 1978 by conversion of the loan stock and would have hed a number of further important advantages for the company. On the size of the transaction criterion they were referred by tha Department of Trade and Industry to the Monopolies and Margers Commission for a ruling as to whether thay might be against the public interest and we are awaiting their report. If the Commission reports in our favour we intend to present fresh proposals to the sheraholders of Sunley end Grovewood designed to achieve the benefits originally anvisaged. The terms will have to have regard to current conditions at the time as the merket velues not only of property but elso of stock exchanga investments - Including our own shares - have declined significantly since our original offer was mada. A most important consideration, end one which hes rightly concerned the Commission. must be the security of our policyholders. The Increase in our reserves resulting from these acquisitions is for us en importent means of strengthening this security.

I must now refer to other events which have ansen from the financial problems of recent months. Acute shortage of funds and high ruling interest rates created situations of difficulty in the secondary banking sector and in turn for a few small insurance companies whose resources were inadequate to meet the strain. The maintenance of confidence in our financial institutions is of cerdinal importance to shareholders and policyholders alike. The responsibility for dealing with this state of effairs rests with the supervisory authorities and wa welcome the steps they ere taking to impose more stringent standards. Any failure in the financial sector harms the reputation of all Snitish institutions both at home and overseas where our earnings are of such vital importance to the national aconomy.

Thase were the considerations that led us to join the consortium which guaranteed the depositions of London & County Securines Limited and also that recantly formed to cover the liabilities of tha Bestion Insurance Co. Limited. Every pound wa spand in such support oparations represents some waakening, however slight. In the security we offer to our own policyholders but I would like to assure shareholders end policyholders alike that there are very definite limits to the extant to which we can be expected to engage in tascue operations, particularly of some of our less responsible competitors.

As a saparete matter we have been following the discussions in EEC circles concerning Insuranca companies reserves and in particular the desirability of setting up a special reserve earmarked for natural cetestrophas. Our own strong position has enabled us to retain for our own account increasing amounts of the risks underwritten but the ever growing size of risks increases the possibility of axceptional losses, whather as a result of neutral catastrophe or as a result of economic or technological catastrophe. Whilst the prasent form of returns to tha Department of Trade anvisages the holding of a claims equalisation reserve such a reserve could not under present tax ragulations, be set up out of untaxed profits. We are studying the problem in the light of current devalopments.

The aituation in which we find ourselves today both nationally end internationally, politically end economically, has naver been so uncertain and eny forecast of what the immediate future has in store is necessarily hazardous. This amphasizes the wisdom of the policy we have followed of building up excaptionally atrong reserves to meet all contingencies and I have no doubt that we will successfully overcome tha problams which wa, in common with other insurers, are currently

Investment income continues to rise end the substantie fife profits should show a further edvence this year. Subject to the outcome of underwriting activities, which ere impossible to forecast at this early etage of the year, I em confident that the current year should produce an increase in pre-tax profits.

DIRECTORS, MANAGEMENT AND STAFF

It is with deap regret that I record the deeth of Sir Peter Hoare Bt., e director of the company from 1953 to 1973. I extend my congretulations to Sir Emile Littler upon the knighthood conferred on him in the New Year's Honoura List. Mr. S. Welton Mountain end Mr. W. H. Whitbreed have announced their intention to ratire hom the board at the conclusion of the Annual Ganerel Meating on 31st May 1974. Mr. S. Walton Mountain has been a director of the company for nearly thirty-five years end Mr. W. H. Whitbread for sixteen years. I would like to pay a high tributa to the important contributions they have made to tha company's affairs over many years. Mr, H. J. A. Harbour, Joint Ganaral Manager, retired at the end of the year and has subsequently joined the board. He has served the company for nearly 45 years and during that period hea been associated with the outstanding growth in the company's property investments. His experience will be invaluable to us in the future. Following Mr. Harbour's retirement, Mr. A. R. N. Ratcliff, Joint Ganeral Menager become Chief General Managar and Mr. F. A. Davies. Deputy Chief

The past year has continued to damand susteined effort from our management end staff end I express to ell of them, on your behelf, our appreciation of the excellent work thay have done to achieve the results now being presented to you.

The following is an extract from the Annual Report and Accounts for the year ended 31st December, 1973 and from the circulated Statement of the Chairman, Sir Rupert Speir.

Results: Record pre-tax profits for the year at £1,324,401 were 13% ahead of 1972 but an increase in the rate of Corporation Tax made the net profit of £,707,029 some £7,000 below

Manufacturing Activities: The demand for our clay and pre-cast concrete products continued to be high until the last few weeks of the year, and our manufacturing capacity was fully stretched. Much of the plant and machinery for our new works on Humberside was delivered during the year. Site levelling has now been completed and the erection of buildings

Merchanting Activities: Sales by our Merchanting Division increased by 23 an over the previous year. A well balanced stock at all our warehouses enabled us to maintain a highly efficient service to our customers and to provide a much needed cushion between the strong demand and the limited

Transport Companies: We have continued our planned progress towards maximum efficiency for our road transport brick deliveries, by introducing vehicles of enhanced carrying capacity wherever possible, and also by increasing the number of vehicles equipped for mechanical brick loading

Future Prospects: Our manufacturing results during the first quarter of the current year have been adversely affected by the three day week, but our merchanting and transport divisions have only been marginally affected. Nevertheless I am satisfied that all elements in the Group are in good heart and are ready to make the most of the available opportunities. I look forward also to further benefits being derived from the expansion of our merchanting and transport divisions, which

Gold falls another $3.25 an ounce

The dollar resumed its fall on

The dollar resumed its fall on European currency markets yesterday, while the mark continued its advance pulling up other curreocies io its wake, and recording an effective floating revaluation of over 10 per cent against the American curreocy.

Speculadve forces around the German curreocy quickly reasserted themselves after early market uncertainty generated by Chancellor Brandr's resignation oo Tuesday. United States dealers also cited renewed criticism in the United States political community over Watergate developments as unsettling for the dollar. The mark closed at 2,4210-30 against the dollar for a new 1974 by high "compared with 2,4520-40 overnight.

Sterling beoefited from the geoeral movement, rising 140
points against the dooar to $2.43.00.
The effective rate widened from 17.28 to 17.30 per cent.
Meanwhile, there were the first signs that some private gold lavestors are divesting themselves of a proportion of their holdings taken up over the past year or so.
These investors are believed to have bought about 600 tons of gold
—roughly a third of total supplies
—in the last 15 months.

The gold price plunged $3.25 an ounce, to close in Londoo at $160, after belog "fixed" at $157.75 in the afternoon—the lowest "fixing" since February. The price bas fallen $10 in the last week.

Discount market quiet

It was a quiet day in the London discount market but cooditions were a little confusing. There was evidence of a small shortage of funds but the market behaved as though money was in surplus, and closing balances were picked up as cheaply as 5 per cent by some houses. The first hids came firmly around 113 per cent, and throughout the morning credit stayed within a range of 114 to 113 per cent.

Copper Range

Copper Range, the United States prodocer, is to base its prices for domestic sales on New York Commodity Exchange prices. Other United States prodocers have prices of around 80 to 82 cents per lb while the nearby position oo Comex is currently around 137.00 cents. There were mixed reactions to the move in London with afternoon prices easing from morning levels. However, on the day-cash wire bars was 513.50 up and three months, £22 dearer.
